Such bill, note or cheque shall, so far as relating to the duty chargeable thereon, be valid, but this shall not relieve any person or firm from liability to the penalty which he or it may have incurred by issuing or giving the said bill, note or cheque unstamped.

19 Subject to the provisions contained in section 18, no person taking a bill of exchange or promissory note drawn or made out of British India and requiring a stamp under this Act, either in payment or as a security, or by purchase or otherwise, shall be entitled to recover thereon, or to make the same available for any purpose, unless at the time when he so takes it, the proper stamp is affixed thereto and cancelled in manner directed by this Act.

23 When the amount or value of the subject-matter of any bond, mortgage-deed, settlement, exchange or gift chargeable under this Act with ad valorem duty, and referred to or mentioned in section 15 cannot be ascertained, the proper stamp to be borne by such instrument may be determined by the person bound under that section to bear the expense of providing the stamp

Provided that, under such instrument, nothing shall be recoverable more than the highest amount or value for which, if stated in an instrument of the same denomination, the stamp actually used under such option would have been sufficient

Provided that, when any one of such instruments purports, for distinct considerations, to convey by way of sale, to lease, to give or to mortgage two or more subject-matters, or to convey by way of sale, to lease or to give one subject matter and to mortgage another, such instrument shall be chargeable with the aggregate amount of the duties to which instruments effecting separately each of such conveyances, leases, gifts or mortgages would be liable under this Act. But where such instrument is stamped with an insufficient stamp, the value of such stamp may be taken into account in computing the aggregate amount so chargeable

29. (a)—When any moveable or immoveable property is sold or is leased

Consideration to be stated in consideration of a fine or premium, the full consideration-money directly or indirectly paid or secured, or agreed to be paid or secured for the same, shall be truly set forth in words at length in the principal or only instrument whereby the property sold or leased is conveyed to, or vested in, the purchaser or lessee or in any other person by his direction

30 Every Judge and head of a public office before whom any instrument chargeable with stamp-duty under this Act is produced, shall by himself or (in the case of the Judge of a High Court or a District Court) by such officer as the Court appoints in this behalf, examine such instrument in order to ascertain whether the proper stamp-duty has been paid in respect thereof

If such duty has not been paid in respect of such instrument such Judge, head or officer, as the case may be, shall impound the same.

31 No instrument chargeable under the first or second schedule shall be received in any Court of justice, or by any person having by law or consent of parties authority to receive evidence, as evidence in any civil proceeding, unless such instrument is duly stamped

35 The Collector on receiving any instrument which has been sent to him under section 33 or 34, or which has come into his hands otherwise than for the purpose of obtaining an adjudication under section 43, shall determine the duty (if any) with which the instrument is chargeable

If it appear to him that the instrument is duly stamped, or that it is not chargeable with stamp-duty under the law in force in British India at the time of its execution, he shall certify by endorsement thereon that it is duly stamped or that it is not so chargeable (as the case may be), and he shall thereupon return such instrument to the person by whom it was produced or in whose possession it was found.

If it appears to him that the instrument is not duly stamped, the Collector shall require the person producing it, or in whose possession it has been found, to pay the proper stamp-duty or the amount required to make up the sum together with interest thereon at five per cent per annum from the date of the instrument, and in case of failure to pay such duty and interest within fifteen days, the Collector may recover the same as if it were an arrear of land-revenue.

The Collector may also prosecute any person who appears to have committed an offence against the stamp law with reference to such instrument, or to any instrument of which an authenticated copy has been sent to him under section 33.

Every instrument so endorsed shall be returned on application to the person who produced it, or in whose possession it was found, provided that no instrument in respect of which a prosecution has been instituted shall be so returned until the prosecution has terminated.

Subject to the provision contained in section 43, such certificate shall be conclusive evidence of the amount of stamp-duty leviable on the instrument, which shall thereupon be admissible as if originally executed on paper bearing the proper stamp.

37 When any duty has been levied under section 31 or section 35 from a person who is not bound under section 15 to provide stamp, he shall be entitled, on production of the certificate mentioned in section 36 in a Civil Court of competent jurisdiction, to a decree against the person so bound under section 15 for the amount so levied.

38. Nothing contained in sections 31 and 35 applies to instruments chargeable with the duty of one anna only. Subject to the provisions of section 18, no such instrument shall be received in evidence for any purpose whatever, or be registered unless it has been stamped at the time of its execution or in accordance with the provisions of section 17.

39 If any instrument sent or returned under section 18, 33 or 34, be lost, destroyed or injured during transmission, the Court or officer sending or returning the same shall not be liable for such loss, destruction or injury.

The person producing any such instrument under section 30 or section 34 may require a copy thereof to be made at his expense and authenticated by the Judge, the registering officer, or the head of the office, as the case may be, and such copy shall be kept in the Court or Office until the Judge, registering officer, or head otherwise directs.

40. When any person from whom money or other moveable property exceeding in amount or value ten rupees is due or claimed to be due, pays or delivers such money or property, the person to whom the same is paid or delivered shall give a receipt for such money or property.

41 When any receipt comes unstamped to the hands of the person to whom it is given, he may affix thereto the necessary adhesive stamp, and upon so doing may require the person who gave it to pay the value of the said stamp.

42 Whoever affixes, in accordance with the Cancellation of adhesive stamp law, any adhesive stamp to any instrument liable to duty shall, at the time of affixing the same, cancel such stamp by writing across it his name or initials, or, if he be a partner, the name or initials of his firm, together with the true date of his so writing, so that the stamp may be effectually cancelled and rendered incapable of being used for any other instrument.

CHAPTER V

ADJUDICATION OF DOUBTS AS TO STAMPS

43 When any instrument chargeable with stamp-duty under this Act, whether previously stamped or not, is brought to the Collector, and the person bringing it desires to have the opinion of that officer as to the duty with which it is so chargeable, and pays a fee of such amount (not exceeding five rupees and not less than eight annas), as the Collector may in each case direct, the Collector shall assess and charge the duty to which, in his judgment, the instrument is liable, and upon payment of such duty or of such a sum as, with the duty already paid thereon, is equal to the duty so assessed and charged, shall certify by endorsement on such instrument that the full duty (stating the amount) with which it is chargeable under this Act has been paid.

The instrument shall thereupon be deemed to be duly stamped and shall be receivable in evidence or otherwise in all Courts and public offices as if originally executed on paper duly stamped.

Provided that nothing contained in the former part of this section shall authorize the Collector to make any such endorsement—

(a) on any instrument executed in British India and brought to him after the expiration of one month from the date of its execution

share of such estate and is not separately assessed as abovementioned—the market-value of the land

(f) to enhance the rent of a tenant having a right of occupancy, and

(g) to abate the rent of any tenant,—

five times the amount by which the rent is sought to be enhanced or abated

The plaint or memorandum of appeal in every suit or appeal mentioned in this section shall state the amount or value with reference to which the fee payable in respect of such plaint or memorandum is to be computed

57 Notwithstanding anything herein contained, throughout the territories subject to the Governor of Fort St George in Council, the fees payable in suits by Government ryots for the recovery of land sold for arrears of revenue shall not exceed the amount which would be payable if the value of the subject-matter were only the rent of the land payable for the year next before the date of presenting the plaint

58 The amount of fee payable under this Act on a memorandum of appeal against an order relating to compensation under any Act for the time being in force for the acquisition of land for public purposes shall be computed according to the difference between the amount awarded and the amount claimed by the appellant

59. If the Court sees reason to think that the annual nett profits or the market-value of any such land, house or garden as is mentioned in section 56, clauses v and vi, have or has been wrongly estimated, the Court may, for the purpose of computing the fee payable in any suit therein mentioned, issue a commission to any proper person directing him to make such local or other investigation as may be necessary, and to report thereon to the Court

may in its discretion refund the excess paid as such fee but if the estimation has been insufficient, the Court shall require the plaintiff to pay so much additional fee as would have been payable had the said market-value or nett profits been rightly estimated

In such case the suit shall be stayed until the additional fee is paid. If the additional fee is not paid within such time as the Court shall fix, the suit shall be dismissed.

61 In suits for mesne profits or for immoveable property and mesne profits, or for an account, if the profits or amount decreed are or is in excess of the profits claimed or the amount at which the plaintiff valued the relief sought, the decree shall not be executed until the difference between the fee actually paid and the fee which would have been payable had the suit comprised the whole of the profits or amount so decreed shall have been paid to the proper officer

When the amount of mesne profits is left to be ascertained in the course of the execution of the decree, if the profits so ascertained exceed the profits claimed, the further execution of the decree shall be stayed until the difference between the fee actually paid and the fee which would have been payable had the suit comprised the whole of the profits so ascertained is paid. If the additional fee is not paid within such time as the Court shall fix, the suit shall be dismissed

Where any suit or appeal in which any such question has arisen comes before a Court of appeal, reference or revision, and such Court considers that the said question has been wrongly decided, to the detriment of the revenue, it shall require the party by whom such fee has been paid to pay so much additional fee as would have been payable had the question been rightly decided, and the provisions of the second paragraph of section 60 shall apply

63. When any appeal is presented to a civil Court, not against the whole of a decision, but only against so much thereof as relates to a portion of the subject-matter of the suit, the memorandum of appeal shall be chargeable with the fee which would have been payable if the subject-matter had been such portion only, and, if on the hearing of such appeal, the respondent takes, under section 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure, an objection to any part of the said decision other than the part appealed against, the Court shall not hear such objection until the respondent shall have paid the additional fee which would have been payable had the appeal comprised the part of the decision so objected to suits embracing separately each of such subjects would be liable under this Act.

Nothing in the former part of this section shall be deemed to affect the power conferred by the Code of Civil Procedure, section 45.

65 No document mentioned in Schedule IV or Schedule V and requiring an adhesive stamp under the rules for the time being in force under this Act shall be filed or acted upon in any proceeding in any Court or office until the stamp has been cancelled in manner prescribed by such rules

66. When the first or only examination of a person who complains of the offence of wrongful confinement, or of wrongful restraint, or of any offence other than an offence for which police-officers may arrest without a warrant, and who has not already presented a petition on which a fee has been levied under this Act, is reduced to writing under the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the complainant shall pay a fee of eight annas, unless the Court thinks fit to remit such payment

67. Whenever an application or petition containing a complaint or charge of an offence, other than an offence for which police officers may arrest without warrant, is presented to a criminal Court, the Court, if it convict the accused person, shall, in addition to the penalty imposed upon him, order him to repay to the complainant the fee paid on such application or petition

In the case mentioned in section 66, the Court, if it convict the accused person, shall, in addition to the penalty imposed upon him, order him to repay to the complainant the fee, if any, paid by the latter for the examination.

When the complainant has paid fees for serving processes in either of the cases mentioned in the first and second paragraphs of this section, the Court, if it convict the accused person, shall, in addition to the penalty imposed upon him, order him to repay such fees to the complainant

All fees ordered to be repaid under this section may be recovered as if they were fines imposed by the Court

PROBATES, LETTERS OF ADMINISTRATION AND CERTIFICATES OF ADMINISTRATION

68. Where any person on applying for the probate of a will or letters of administration has estimated the property of the deceased to be of greater value than the same has afterwards proved to be, and has consequently paid too high a court-fee thereon, if within six months after the true value of the property has been ascertained, such person produces the probate or letters to the Court by which the probate or letters has or have been granted, and delivers to such Court a particular inventory and valuation of the property of the deceased, verified by affidavit or affirmation, and if such Court is satisfied that a greater fee was paid on the probate or letters than the law required,

the said Court may at its discretion—

(a) cancel the stamp on the probate or letters, if such stamp has not been already cancelled,

(b) order that another stamp be substituted for denoting the court-fee which should have been paid thereon, and

(c) order that an allowance for the difference between them, or a refund of the amount in money, be made as in the case of spoiled stamps

69. Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of

Relief where debts due from a deceased person have been paid out of his estate

such Court that an executor or administrator has paid debts due from the deceased to such an amount as,

being deducted out of the amount or value of the estate, reduces the same to a sum which, if it had been the whole gross amount or value of the estate, would have occasioned a less court-fee to be paid on the probate or letters of administration granted in respect of such estate than has been actually paid thereon under this Act,

the Court may order the amount of the difference to be refunded, provided the same be claimed within three years after the date of such probate or letters

But when, by reason of any legal proceeding, the debts due from the deceased have not been ascertained and paid, or his effects have not been recovered and made available, and in consequence thereof the executor or administrator is prevented from claiming the return of such difference within the said term of three years, the Court may allow such further time for making the claim as may appear to be reasonable under the circumstances

70 Whenever a grant of probate or letters of administration has been

Relief in case of several grants

or is made in respect of the whole of the property belonging to an estate, and the full fee chargeable under this Act has been or is paid thereon, no fee shall be chargeable under the same Act when a like grant is made in respect of the whole or any part of the same property belonging to the same estate

Whenever such a grant has been or is made in respect of any property forming part of an estate, the amount of fees then actually paid under this Act shall be deducted when a like grant is made in respect of property belonging to the same estate, identical with or including the property to which the former grant relates

71 The probate of the will, or the letters of

administration of the effects, of any person deceased, heretofore or hereafter granted, shall be deemed valid and

available by his executors or administrators for recovering, transferring or assigning any moveable or immoveable property whereof or whereto the deceased was possessed or entitled, either wholly or partially as a trustee, notwithstanding the amount or value of such property is not included in the amount or value of the estate in respect of which a court-fee was paid on such probate or letters of administration

72. When any person on applying for probate

or letters of administration has estimated the estate of the deceased to be of less value than the same has afterwards proved to be, and has

in consequence paid too low a court-fee thereon, the Court by which the probate or letters has or have been granted, may, on the value of the estate of the deceased being verified by affidavit or affirmation, cause the probate or letters of administration to be duly stamped on payment of the full court-fee which ought to have been originally paid thereon in respect of such value, and of the further penalty, if the probate or letters is or are produced within one year from the date of the grant, of five times, or if it or they is or are produced after one year from such date, of twenty times, such proper court-fee, without any deduction of the court fee originally paid on such probate or letters

Provided that, if the application be made within six months after the ascertainment of the true value of the estate and the discovery that too low a court-fee was at first paid on the probate or letters, and if the Court is satisfied that such fee was paid in consequence of a mistake or of its not being known at the time that some particular part of the estate belonged to the deceased, and without any intention of fraud or to delay the payment of the proper court fee, the Court may remit the said penalty, and cause the probate or letters to be duly stamped on payment only of the sum wanting to make up the fee which should have been at first paid thereon

too low a court-fee has been paid at first, the said authority shall not cause the same to be duly stamped in

manner aforesaid until the administrator has given such security to the Court by which the letters of administration have been granted as ought by law to have been given on the granting thereof in case the full value of the estate of the deceased had then been ascertained

74. Where too low a court-fee has been paid

Executors, &c., not paying full court-fee on probates, &c., within six months after discovery of underpayment

part of the estate belonged to the deceased, if any executor or administrator acting under such probate or letters does not, within six months after the discovery of the mistake or of any effects not known at the time to have belonged to the deceased, apply to the said authority and pay what is wanting to make up the court-fee which ought to have been paid at first on such probate or letters, he shall forfeit the sum of one thousand rupees and also a further sum at the rate of ten rupees per cent on the amount of the sum wanting to make up the proper court-fee

75 When any Court orders under this

Collector to deliver or pay stamp or amount directed by Court

chapter any stamp to be substituted or amount to be refunded, such stamp or amount shall be delivered or paid by any Collector to the person producing the Court's order or certificate authorizing such delivery or payment

76. The provisions of this chapter shall, mutatis

mutandis, apply to certificates granted under Act No XL of 1854 (for making better provision for the care of the persons and property of Minors in the Pre*sidency of Fort William in Bengal), or Act No XXVII of 1860 (for facilitating the collection of debts on successions, and for the security of parties paying debts to the representatives of deceased persons), or Act No XX of 1861 (for making better provision for the care of the persons and property of Minors in the Presidency of Bombay), or Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827 (to provide for the formal recognition of Heirs, Executors and Administrators, and for the appointment of Administrators and Managers of property by the Courts), and to the holders of such certificates*

REFUNDS

77. Subject to such rules as may from time to time be made by the Governor General in Council as to the evidence, by affidavit or otherwise, which the Collector may require, allowance shall be made by the Collector for stamps spoiled in the cases hereinafter mentioned (that is to say) —

(1) The stamp on any paper inadvertently and undesignedly spoiled, obliterated, or by any means rendered unfit for the purpose intended, before any instrument written thereon is executed by any party, and for which stamp no money or other consideration has been paid or given to the attorney, pleader, or other person employed to transact the business intended to have been carried into execution thereby, or to the person by whom the same was written

(2) Any adhesive stamp which has never been used or affixed to any paper, but which has been inadvertently and undesignedly spoiled or rendered unfit for use

(3) The stamp used or intended to be used for any bill of exchange or promissory note, signed by or on behalf of the drawer or intended drawer, but not delivered out of the hands to the payee or intended payee, or any person on his behalf, or deposited with any person as a security for the payment of money, or in any way negotiated, issued, or put in circulation, or made use of in any other manner whatever, and which being a bill of exchange has not been accepted by the drawee, and provided that the paper on which any such stamp is impressed does not bear any signature intended as or for the acceptance of any bill of exchange to be afterwards written thereon

(4) The stamp used or intended to be used for any bill of exchange or promissory note signed by or on behalf of the drawer thereof, but which from any omission or error has been spoiled or rendered useless, although the same, being a bill of exchange, may have been presented for acceptance or accepted or endorsed, or being a promissory note, may have been delivered to the payee, provided that another completed and duly stamped bill of exchange or promissory note is produced identical in every particular, except in the correction of such error or omission as aforesaid, with the spoiled bill or note

(5) The stamp used for any of the following instruments, that is to say —

(a) an instrument executed by any party thereto, but afterwards found to be absolutely void in law from the beginning

(b) an instrument executed by any party thereto, but afterwards found unfit by reason of any error or mistake therein for the purpose originally intended

(c) an instrument executed by any party thereto, but which by reason of the death of any person by whom it is necessary that it should be executed, without having executed the same, or of the refusal of any such person to execute the same, or to advance any money intended to be thereby secured, cannot be completed so as to effect the intended transaction in the form proposed

(d) an instrument executed by any party thereto, which for want of the execution thereof by some material and necessary party, and his inability or refusal to sign the same, is in fact incomplete and insufficient for the purpose for which it was intended

(e) an instrument executed by any party thereto, which by reason of the refusal of any person to act under the same, or by the refusal or non acceptance of any office thereby granted totally fails of the intended purpose

(f) an instrument executed by any party thereto, which for want of registration within the time required by law becomes null and void

(g) an instrument executed by any party thereto, which becomes useless in consequence of the transaction intended to be thereby effected being effected by some other instrument duly stamped

(1) that in the case of an executed instrument,

(a) that instrument is given up to be cancelled

(b) the application for relief is made within six months after the date of the instrument, or, if it is not dated, within six months after the execution thereof by the person by whom it was first or alone executed, except where from unavoidable circumstances any instrument for which another instrument has been substituted cannot be given up to be cancelled within the aforesaid period, and in that case within six months after the date of execution of the substituted instrument, and except where the spoiled instrument has been sent abroad, and in that case within six months after it has been received back in any part of British India

(c) no suit has been instituted in which the instrument could or would have been given or offered in evidence

(2) that in the case of stamped paper, not having any executed instrument written thereon, and of an adhesive stamp not affixed to any material, the application for relief is made within six months after the stamp has been spoiled as aforesaid

for an instrument liable to duty a stamp of greater value than was necessary, or has inadvertently used any stamp for an instrument not liable to any duty, the Collector may, on application made within six months after the date of the instrument, or, if it is not dated, within six months after the execution thereof by the person by whom it was first or alone executed, and upon the instrument, if liable to any duty, being re-stamped with the proper duty, cancel and allow as spoiled the stamp so misused

79. In any case in which allowance is made for spoiled or misused stamps the Collector may give in lieu thereof other stamps of the same denomination and value, or, if required, and he thinks proper, stamps of any other denomination to the same amount in value, or, at his discretion, the same value in money, deducting the proper allowance on the purchase from Government of stamps of the like description

80 When any person is possessed of a stamp which has not been spoiled or rendered unfit or useless for the purpose intended, but for which he has no immediate use, the Collector may, if he in his discretion think fit, repay to the applicant the amount or value of such stamp in money, deducting the proper discount, upon his delivering up the stamp to be cancelled, and proving to the Collector's satisfaction that it was purchased by the applicant with a bond fide intention to use it, and that he has paid the full value thereof without any deduction (except only the amount of such discount), and that the stamp was so purchased within the period of six months next preceding the application

81 If a plaint or appeal which has been rejected by the lower Court on any of the grounds mentioned in the Code of Civil Procedure is ordered to be received, or if a suit is remanded in appeal, on any of the grounds mentioned in section 562 of the same Code, for a second decision by the lower Court, the appellate Court may grant to the appellant a certificate, authorizing him to receive back from the Collector the full amount of fee paid on the memorandum of appeal

Provided that, if, in the case of a remand in appeal, the order of remand does not cover the whole of the subject-matter of the suit, the certificate so granted shall not authorize the appellant to receive back more than so much fee as would have been originally payable on the part or parts of such subject-matter in respect whereof the suit has been remanded

82 When an application for a review of judgment is presented on or after the nineteenth day from the date of the decree, the Court, unless the delay was caused by the applicant's laches, may, in its discretion, grant him a certificate authorizing him to receive back from the Collector so much of the fee paid on the application as exceeds the fee which would have been payable had it been presented before such day

83 When an application for a review of judgment is admitted, and on the re-hearing, the Court reverses or modifies its former decision on the ground of mistake in law or fact, the applicant shall be entitled to a certificate from the Court authorizing him to receive back from the Collector the fee paid on the application.

But nothing in the former part of this section shall entitle the applicant to such certificate where the reversal or modification is due, wholly or in part, to fresh evidence which might have been produced at the original hearing.

84. When a plaint disclosing a reasonable case on the merits is presented to any civil Court in such a form that the Judge rejects it, not for any substantial defect, but on account of a purely technical error in form only, and so as to leave the plaintiff free to prosecute the same case in another form against the same defendant, the value of the stamp on the plaint shall be refunded to the plaintiff on his presenting an application to the Collector of the District in which the Court is situate, together with a certificate from the Judge who rejected the plaint, that it was rejected under the circumstances above described and that in his opinion the value of the stamp should be refunded.

85 The Chief Controlling Revenue Authority may upon application remit wholly or in part any additional duty levied under section 31

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

The provisions of the law relating to stamp-duties and Court-fees are now contained in six different Acts, and numerous orders of the Governor General in Council notified from time to time in the Government Gazette during the last seven years. It is desirable for the convenience of the public to bring these provisions within the compass of a single enactment, and it is proposed to take this opportunity to introduce measures for the improved working of the law, which experience has shown to be much needed, and at the same time to provide for the acquisition of a moderate increase of revenue from stamp-duties.

2 Such increase is to be obtained partly by the amendment of those provisions of the law which are specially designed to protect the revenue from loss through evasion of the payment of the proper stamp-duty, and partly by the enhancement of the present rates of duty in certain cases.

3. There is reason to believe that the obligation of stamping documents at the time of their execution is at present largely evaded. Prosecutions for such evasion are rarely resorted to, and the criminal penalties provided by the existing law may be said to be almost inoperative, so that frauds upon the revenue are systematically practised in the belief that the worst result to be apprehended from their detection is the levy of a fine of a certain fixed amount, in addition to the unpaid duty. The most important object to be kept in view consequently in the framing of a new Stamp Bill is to stop, as far as may be practicable, every hole of escape from the liability which the law imposes upon the executant of instruments subject to stamp-duty.

5. It has been shown that, in the present state of the law, the obligation to see that all documents produced in Courts and public offices are properly stamped is generally ignored unless and until the parties producing them desire to put the documents in evidence. It is not an uncommon thing for persons to produce documents improperly stamped, and on being told that they will have to pay a specified amount by way of penalty, to withdraw the documents and forego putting them in evidence, and in such cases they are allowed to escape punishment for the offence which they have committed in not stamping or sufficiently stamping their instruments, and which is not the less an offence against the law and punishable as such, whether they wish to use the instrument or not

6. Further, where the presiding Judge or officer does take cognizance of the omission to use a proper stamp, some difficulty is found in securing the due punishment of the offender owing to the obscure and somewhat conflicting provisions of the existing law as to the constitution of an "offence." Whilst, on the one hand, the criminal penalty is declared to be incurred upon the mere fact of under-stamping, on the other the provisions relating to the procedure to be followed on the production of unstamped documents deal prominently with the question of intention on the part of the producer, and the Courts generally ignore the presumption of fraudulent intention in the absence of proof of the existence of such intention. As such proof is not forthcoming, the producer of the instrument almost invariably escapes, mulcted only in the civil penalty which the Court is empowered to levy at its own discretion and without reference to other authority.

7. To meet this state of things, it is provided in section 30 of the Bill that every Court and head of an office shall take notice of and examine all instruments produced before them, that they shall determine whether the instrument is properly stamped, and, if not, shall impound it. Section 31 provides for dealing with an impounded instrument which is required to be put in evidence, so that there may be no obstruction to the administration of justice, whilst section 33, amongst other things, provides that this detention of the document and levy of a validating fine in the form of additional duty shall in no case protect the person responsible for the under stamping from the criminal penalties to which his offence renders him liable. Section 35 prescribes the course to be followed by the Collector when under-stamped documents or copies thereof come into his hands, and section 36 determines the effect of the realization of the deficient duty as regards the validity of the instrument, and provides for the ultimate disposal of the latter—according as a criminal prosecution may or may not be undertaken.

8. Section 37 contains an entirely new provision and one that seems likely to stimulate the production of instruments liable to stamp-duty and not properly stamped.

It frequently happens that the person interested in putting in evidence an insufficiently stamped document was not bound by law to bear the expense of the stamp that should have been used at the time of its execution, yet he has to bear the penalty incurred through the laches of the actual defaulter. As a consequence of this state of the law, the person interested in producing the document is often deterred from so doing by the consideration of the penalty. In such cases it cannot be doubted that production will be greatly facilitated by the provisions of this section which enable the producer to throw the cost of producing the unstamped or improperly stamped document upon another person.

9. Important changes are proposed in regard to some of the instruments chargeable with ad valorem duties specified in the first Schedule, namely, Bills of Exchange payable otherwise than on demand, Bonds, Conveyances, Policies of Insurance and other instruments such as Promissory Notes, Leases and Mortgage-deeds which are subject to the same duties as Bills of Exchange, Bonds and Conveyances respectively.

10. Under the present law all Bonds and Conveyances in which the amount secured, or consideration stated, ranges between Rs 50 and Rs 10,000, and other instruments similarly chargeable, are subject to rates of stamp-duty equivalent to 1 and  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent, respectively, on the maximum amount of each step in the scale of ascents by which the assessment is regulated. So far, with one exception only, to be presently stated, the sliding scale of rates of stamp-duty follow the plan of the English stamp law, but the tax is as much heavier in proportion in this country as the rupee half rupee, quarter rupee and one anna respectively exceed in value the shilling, its half and quarter, and one penny. The exception adverted to is that, whereas in the English scale of ascents there is no intermediate step between £100 and £200 or £200 and £300, and so on, in the Indian stamp law the ascents between Rs 1,000 and Rs 10,000 are by steps of Rs 500.

11. When the amount involved in the instrument chargeable with stamp-duty exceeds Rs 10,000, the percentage of charge is, by the present stamp law in this country, diminished as the amount upon which the duty is assessed increases, whereas under the English law the same proportion of charge is maintained throughout, whatever may be the amount of the subject-matter of the instrument liable to stamp-duty.

12. The rates of stamp-duty also charged on Bills of Exchange and Promissory Notes other than those payable on demand are, relatively to the duties chargeable on Bonds and Conveyances under the Indian stamp law, lower than the English rates. For, whilst the stamp law in England imposes on Conveyances, Bonds and Bills of Exchange the duty of 12d, 6d, and about 1½d for every £10, here the rates on those three classes of instruments are 16 annas, 8 annas and about 1 anna for every Rs 100 respectively.

13. The principle of the changes now proposed may be said to be the equalisation of the existing rates of percentage of duty upon the amount taxed and their adjustment to the English standard—the rupee and its halves and quarters being taken as the equivalent of the shilling and its halves and quarters respectively, and the anna as equal to the penny.

15. The minimum rate of stamp-duty now payable in the case of Bonds is to be omitted. It is thought that all instruments of this class—however low may be the amount involved—can without any hardship bear a four annas tax, whilst so comparatively numerous are the Bonds or other instruments of obligation in respect of amounts not exceeding twenty-five rupees that the additional rate of two annas to which it is proposed to subject them is likely to produce a material increase of revenue.

16 It is proposed to include Policies of Insurance on life in the general class of instruments of insurance liable to stamp-duty, and to double the existing rates of charge on these instruments generally, this change is in fact nothing more than a reversion to the rates chargeable on these documents previously to the passing of the Stamp Act of 1869. Then there was no exception in favour of Life Policies, and instruments of insurance generally were charged at the rate of 8 annas per Rs 1,000 of the amount insured.

17 Instruments guaranteeing the repayment of loans made upon the deposit of valuable securities are by the present law subjected to a small fixed duty of two rupees only, without reference to the amount of the loan or the extent of the accommodation obtained through the transaction. It seems more equitable and consistent with the general principles which govern the determination of stamp duties that these instruments should be taxed according to the amount involved in the transaction, hence it is proposed to substitute an ad valorem for a fixed duty, and, having regard to the short period for which the loan is granted, to assess the new duty at one-half of the rate applicable to Bills of Exchange.

18 The Bill provides also for the revival of the rule, in regard to the duty leviable on certain promissory notes, which was in force previous to the passing of the Stamp Act of 1869, under which a promissory note made payable at some time exceeding one year from the date of the note was liable to the same rate of duty as a Bond. As the obligatory instrument ordinarily executed in this country when loans are taken—the “tamassuk”—is more of the nature of a promissory note than a bond, it seems probable that some unnecessary sacrifice of revenue has resulted from the relinquishment of the former mode of assessment to which it is now proposed to revert in these cases.

X 19. The limit of amount within which cheques and other orders for the payment of money and receipts are exempted from any stamp-duty is to be reduced from twenty to ten rupees. The payment of one anna stamp-duty can hardly be considered an oppressive tax in such cases, whilst so comparatively numerous are the transactions of this kind involving small amounts, that the abolition of the exemption in respect of sums ranging between twenty and ten rupees is likely to secure a considerable increase of revenue. Further, the Bill aims at the enforcement of the delivery of a receipt for the payment of any amount in excess of ten rupees in satisfaction of a debt. Under the present law a person receiving money in payment of a debt above a certain amount is obliged to grant a receipt to the payer if the latter demands it. This enactment has been found by experience to attain its object but very imperfectly, as the payers are generally too indifferent about the matter to exercise their legal right, and consequently the payee it is believed, in a large number, if not the majority, of cases, escapes his obligation. As the obligation was imposed solely in the interest of the revenue, the principle on which it rests is not overstrained by the provision of the Bill which, upholding the obligation of the payee, dispenses with the antecedent condition for its enforcement.

20 The duty chargeable on instruments evidencing an appraisement or an award is raised by the Bill to about five times its present amount. Before 1869, these documents were not subject to any stamp-duty: the tax then imposed was purely experimental. The increase now proposed still leaves instruments of this description more lightly taxed than they are in England.

21 The Bill substitutes an ad valorem rate of duty for the fixed amount now chargeable on Partition-deeds. That amount is Rs 16 and in some cases proves such a heavy tax that the matter has been made the subject of a reference to Government, an equal charge on all partitions without reference to the value of the property divided must work unsatisfactorily. An ad valorem duty is a more equitable form of charge, and the rate has been assimilated to that of bonds, which is one-half of the rate to which ordinary deeds of conveyance are subject.

22 An ad valorem charge is also proposed in lieu of a fixed duty for instruments of gift and exchange. All fixed duties are more or less objectionable, as they must either be pitched so low as to bring in no appreciable amount of revenue, or they must press with undue severity in cases in which the property concerned is of inconsiderable value. The difficulty of imposing ad valorem duties in these cases arises out of the want of a safe basis for their assessment, there being no consideration expressed in the instruments to be charged. It is proposed to surmount this difficulty by imposing on the parties the obligation of stating truly—under heavy penalties for fraudulent statements—the approximate value of the subject of the deed of gift or exchange.

23 The stamp-duties heretofore chargeable on pleaders' and mukhtars' certificates under the Pleader's Act are included in the Bill as part of the scheme of consolidation. It seems only just and consistent that advocates and attorneys should be similarly taxed in respect of the practice of their profession in the Courts of this country, and it is proposed to subject them to the payment of five hundred rupees, and two hundred and fifty rupees stamp-duty, respectively, on their enrolment as advocates and attorneys of a High Court. The members of the faculty practising in the Courts of England, Ireland and Scotland are somewhat similarly taxed in respect of such practice.

24 The only changes in the rates of Court-fees contemplated by the Bill are (1) in respect of suits instituted in the Courts of Small Causes, (2) the grant of probates of wills and letters of administration, and (3) the fees leviable for the service of processes.

X 25 The new rates for Small Cause Court suits involve a decrease of  $2\frac{1}{2}$  per cent in the case of suits of this class instituted in the Presidency Towns, and a proportionate increase of the rates heretofore obtaining in such Courts situated outside those towns.

The present rates in the Presidency Towns are 2 annas per rupee or  $12\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. Elsewhere they are the same as in other Courts, namely,  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. on the average amount involved in the suit. The town rate is clearly too high and some relief is called for. This, it is thought, may be unobjectionably given by the application of the equalisation principle; and the enhancement of the rate heretofore levied in the Mufassal Small Cause Court is defensible on the ground that, as the judicial agency and general machinery of these Courts is more costly than those of the ordinary Civil Courts, whilst a complete determination of the matter in dispute is obtained in the one class of Courts and not in the other, equitable considerations admit of a higher rate of charge upon the litigants in the former case than in the latter.

26 Up to 1870 no stamp-duty was charged on Letters of Administration to the effects of deceased persons or Probates of Wills. The rate of duty then fixed was tentative and expressly declared to be subject to revision on the occasion of the next amendment of the law on the subject, it is now proposed to increase it from two, to two and a half per centum.

27 The fees now chargeable for the service of processes issuing from the Civil, Revenue and Criminal Courts are fixed by rules framed by the High Courts. It is proposed to substitute for this procedure the fixed rates specified under Nos 20 and 21 of the fifth schedule of the Bill, and to discontinue the provisions of the existing law for the regulation of the process-serving establishments.

The experience gained through the working of the present system, as to the actual cost of serving processes, renders possible the determination of the amount of the fee required in the case of each kind of process to cover the cost of its service, and it seems desirable not only that the Court-fees of this class should, like all other fees leviable under the Court-fees Act, be fixed by the Act itself, but that the regulation of the establishments to be maintained for the service of processes should be under the exclusive control of the Executive authorities.

28 It is often asserted that the provisions of the stamp law are so complicated as to be ill-understood by the public generally, and on this ground a disposition has been shown sometimes on the part of the administrators of the law to excuse, or take a very lenient view of, non-compliance with its requirements; the Bill has been framed therefore with the special endeavour to render the requirements of the law generally intelligible, by large additions to the interpretation-clauses, improved arrangement of its provisions and a simpler classification of the contents of the schedules.

29 The other alterations of the existing law contained in the Bill relate chiefly to matters of detail or procedure, are of minor importance, and do not appear to call for any special explanation.

The 25th September 1877.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 10th October 1877, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

No. 17 of 1877.

A Bill to enable the District Judges of the Presidency of Fort Saint George to suspend and remove certain ministerial officers, and for other purposes

Whereas it is expedient to empower the District Judges of the Presidency of Fort Saint George to suspend and remove ministerial officers of the Courts of Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs, and whereas it is also expedient to provide for the transfer of ministerial officers from one Court to another, It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1 For section 23 of the Madras Civil Courts Act, 1873, the following shall be substituted (that is to say)—

“23. The ministerial officers of the Courts of the Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs shall be appointed by such Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs, respectively, subject to the approval or confirmation of the District Judge within whose jurisdiction such Courts are situate, and may be suspended or removed from office either by the said District Judge or (subject to his approval or confirmation) by such Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs respectively.”

Addition after section 24 of Act III of 1873.

2 After section 24 of the same Act, the following section shall be inserted:—

“24 A The Local Government may, at the instance of the District Judge, transfer from any Court, except the High Court, to any other Court, except the High Court, all or any of the ministerial officers of the Court of such Judge, or of any Subordinate Judge or District Munsif under his control

“The District Judge may transfer all or any of the ministerial officers of any Court under his control to any other such Court”

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The Madras Government and the Madras High Court desire that the District Judges should have the power of suspending or removing ministerial officers of the Courts of the Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs in addition to the power which they now possess under Act III of 1873, section 23, of approving and confirming those officers. The first section of the Bill is intended to effect this object.

Powers, resembling those conferred by Act VI of 1871, section 37, are also given to transfer ministerial officers from one Court to another.

The following preliminary Report of a Select Committee, together with the Bill as settled by them, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 10th October 1877 —

We, the undersigned members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to define and amend the law relating to Promissory Notes, Bills of Exchange and Cheques was referred, have considered the papers specified in the appendix, and have the honour to present this preliminary report

2 This Bill, of which a draft, hereinafter called the draft Bill, was prepared by the late Indian Law Commission, is intended to be one of the chapters of the Indian Civil Code, and was introduced and referred to a Select Committee in December 1867. The then mercantile members of Council, while admitting the desirability of codification, objected to the draft Bill on account of its deviations from English law. In order to obviate this objection several alterations have now been made in its substantial provisions. The Bill has also been rearranged, and some additions have been made in order to supply omissions. These changes, which embody most of the suggestions contained in the papers mentioned in the appendix, will appear in detail from this report.

3 It may, however, be convenient, before proceeding further, to notice briefly the alterations which have been made in order to render the Bill conformable to English law.

4 The draft Bill provided that an indorsee for value after maturity should have only the rights of his indorser. This does not except the case of a bill of exchange drawn or accepted for the purpose of enabling some party thereto to raise money thereon. We have added an exception in section 80 in order to meet this case.

6 The draft Bill also made all instruments which fell due upon a holiday payable on the next succeeding business day instead of, as in English law, on the next preceding business day, except in the case of a public holiday. We have in section 26 adhered to the English law, and have provided that, besides the usual public holidays, such days shall be public holidays within the meaning of the Act as the Local Government may declare.

7 The draft Bill made no provision for the case in which interest at a specified rate is expressly made payable on a note or bill. It merely provided that interest at the current rate should be payable on a bill dishonoured by non-acceptance, but only from the maturity of the instrument. The same rule was adopted in the case of dishonour by non-payment of a note, bill or cheque. We have substituted the English law on this subject by declaring (section 101) that, where interest is expressly provided for in the note or bill, it shall be calculated, as against all parties, at the specified rate from the date of the instrument until tender or realization of the amount due. Where no interest is specified we have declared (section 101), that, except in cases within section 532 of the Civil Procedure Code, interest shall run at six per cent per annum from the date at which the amount ought to have been paid by the party charged. We have also added an explanation that an indorser can only be charged with such interest from the date of the receipt by him of notice of dishonour.

8 We have restored (section 117) the rule, which the draft Bill omitted, that a notice of dishonour must inform the party to whom it is given that he will be held liable.

9 The draft Bill provided that when a note, bill or cheque had been lost, or would not be produced by the owner, he might nevertheless enforce his claim against the maker or acceptor if he gave security, to the satisfaction of the Court, to indemnify the defendant against the claims of any other person upon the instrument. No provision was made for an action against the indorser. The English law, however, provides (17 & 18 Vict., c. 125, section 57 = Act V of 1866, section 14) that, in any action upon a negotiable instrument, the loss of it shall not be set up as a defence if an indemnity is given, to the satisfaction of the Court, against the claims of any other person. And the owner of such a document was always entitled in equity to demand payment on giving a sufficient indemnity. We have, therefore, considered that we should correctly embody the English law by providing (section 103) that any person liable to pay and paying the amount due on a note, bill or cheque shall be entitled to be indemnified, and by leaving (section 8) the liability of all parties the same as if the instrument had been forthcoming.

10 The draft Bill extended to instruments payable to order the principle upon which protection is afforded by English law to the party primarily liable upon an instrument payable to bearer. The acceptor, maker or indorser of a negotiable instrument payable to bearer, but not of an instrument payable to order, is, by English law, discharged by payment to any person in possession of the instrument, if the payer has no reason to believe the possessor is not the true holder. We have in section 104, clause (c), restricted the protection to such instruments.

11 The Bill as now altered consists of fourteen chapters. In the first chapter we have inserted the usual preliminary matter. We have (section 1) excluded hundis from the operation of the Bill. We have provided (section 2) for the repeal of some enactments which are replaced by the provisions of the Bill.

12 Section 3 contains a definition of the term "banker" drawn from 39 & 40 Vict., c. 80, s. 3, and of "Notary Public." Notaries are seldom found in the Mufassal, and the Bill provides that their functions may be exercised by persons appointed for that purpose by the Governor General in Council.

13 Chapter II deals with notes, bills and cheques, bills in sets and crossed cheques. We have here substituted definitions which appear to be more comprehensive and accurate than those in the draft Bill. For instance, according to the original definitions, a bill of exchange differs from a cheque only in requiring that the money ordered by the instrument to be paid should be held at the disposal of the drawer—a distinction which appears to us inaccurate, as a bill of exchange is in law, equally with a cheque, assumed to be drawn against funds in the hands of the drawee. Again, the definition of a cheque would include such an instrument as a tradesman's bill on which the debtor writes an order to pay for presentation to a cash-keeper—the ordinary mode of paying bills in mercantile houses, at least in Calcutta, and one adopted by many private persons. According to the draft Bill such an instrument would apparently be negotiable—a very serious result indeed. Again, the definition of a cheque does not require that it should be drawn upon a banker or a person acting as such, nor that it should be payable on demand. These are only a few of what seemed to us the more obvious omissions. We have, therefore, framed definitions which we think will include all the essentials of these instruments.

14 Section 8 defines the holder of a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque as a person entitled in his own name to the possession of it and to receive or recover the amount due thereon from the parties thereto. The holder of an instrument at the time of its loss or destruction also comes within the definition. The corresponding provision of the draft Bill seemed to us vague and unsatisfactory in its definition of "holder," and it was not consistently applied in the substantive provisions of the Bill.

15 In section 15 we have modified the definition of indorsement in the draft Bill by providing that it must be made for the purpose of negotiation. We have also included in the definition a like signature upon a stamped paper intended to be completed as a negotiable instrument.

16 We have added a section (17) providing, in accordance with English law, that, when an instrument may be construed either as a promissory note or bill of exchange, it shall be taken to be that which the holder elects.

17 In section 19 we have supplied an omission in the draft Bill by providing that an instrument in which no time for payment is specified and all cheques are payable on demand.

18 Section 20 provides for the filling up by the holder of blanks in a stamped paper intended to be completed as a negotiable instrument, but not completed when issued. The holder may complete the instrument for any amount covered by the stamp. To this section is added as an illustration section 9 of the draft Bill.

19 To the four presumptions as to negotiable instruments contained in the draft Bill and stated in section 27 of the present Bill, we have added presumptions that an accepted bill was accepted within a reasonable time after date and before maturity, that every bill or note receipted on the back was paid by the acceptor or maker, that is, by the party primarily liable to pay, and that a lost instrument was duly stamped.

20 In addition to the provisions of the draft Bill as to bills in sets, we have (section 29) provided for the right of that holder of one of the parts who first acquires title to his part to possession of the other parts. We have also defined an acceptor in section 7 so as to include an acceptor of a set of bills.

22 Chapter III deals with the parties to negotiable instruments.

23 Section 38, after providing that all persons capable of contracting may be parties to notes, bills and cheques, adds that a minor may draw, indorse, deliver and negotiate such instruments so as to bind all parties except himself.

24 Section 39 provides for persons binding themselves through their authorized agents, and adds that a general authority is not sufficient for this purpose, and that an authority to draw a bill does not of itself authorize an indorsement.

25 Sections 41 and 42 provide for the liability of partners on notes, bills and cheques, and section 43 applies the provisions of the Indian Contract Act, sections 42, 43 and 45 and chapter XI, to the rights and liabilities of partners created thereby, as well as to joint rights and liabilities.

26 Section 45 defines the liability of the drawee of a bill or cheque.

27 Section 46 extends to the case of the maker of a note, a definition contained in section 60 of the draft Bill of the liability of the acceptor of a bill of exchange.

28 Section 47 adds to the category of persons who (according to section 61 of the draft Bill) can accept a bill, all or some of several joint drawees.

29 Section 49 provides that every prior party to a negotiable instrument is liable thereon to a holder in due course, that is, to a bona fide holder for value.

30 Section 50 lays down that the maker of a note or cheque, the drawer of a bill until acceptance, and the acceptor are ordinarily the principal parties to the bill and the other parties their sureties, and section 51 adds that each prior party is a principal as regards the holder, and that the intermediate parties between such prior party and the holder are sureties for him. By section 52 the provisions of the Indian Contract Act, sections 132 to 147 (both inclusive) are rendered applicable to these relations of suretyship.

31 We have added a section (54) estopping the maker of a note, the drawer of a bill or cheque and the acceptor of a bill for the honour of the drawer from denying the original validity of the instrument.

32 Section 55 adopts, with modifications, the provisions of section 117 of the Evidence Act, 1872, and of sections 36 and 62 of the draft Bill, which estop the acceptor from denying the drawer's signature. The estoppel is, we think, properly confined by this section to suits by holders other than the drawer.

33 Section 56 estops the maker of a note and the acceptor of a bill payable to order from denying the payee's capacity to indorse.

34 Section 57 adds to the estoppel against denying false signatures, contained in section 35 of the draft Bill, an estoppel against denying the capacity to contract of any prior party to a negotiable instrument in suit.

35 Section 58 also carries on the same subject by declaring the acceptor of a bill with a forged indorsement not to be thereby relieved from liability if he knew it to be forged at the time of acceptance, and section 59 declares that the acceptor of a bill drawn in a fictitious name is not thereby relieved from liability to pay upon an indorsement by the same hand as the drawer's signature, and purporting to be made by the drawer.

36 These sections supply some omissions in the draft Bill, and, we think, adequately provide for the due currency of negotiable instruments when once put into circulation and for the protection of their holders.

37 The Bill then goes on to deal with the consideration for negotiable instruments and to protect the holder for value of instruments with respect to which there may have been originally no consideration, or a subsequent failure of consideration, wholly or in part.

38 These sections (60 to 63, both inclusive) are substantially taken from the draft Bill. We have added an illustration to section 62.

39 Chapter IV deals with negotiation.

40 To section 64, which is substantially the same as section 18 of the draft Bill, we have added an explanation to the effect that an instrument delivered upon a condition which has not happened is not negotiable except by a holder for value and without notice of such condition.

41 Where the holder of a note or bill payable to or to the order of a specified person delivers it to another person without indorsing it, but with intent to transfer his title thereto, we think that (with reference to the Code of Civil Procedure, sections 36 and 37) the transferee should not be required to sue in the name of his transferor. We have framed section 66 accordingly.

42 In section 67 we have, in substantial accordance with section 40 of the draft Bill, dealt with the case of a bona fide holder for value of a bill transferred without indorsement. In such a case we have declared the holder entitled to a return of the consideration if the bill is, after the transfer, avoided on account of any matter prior to the transfer, provided such return is claimed within a reasonable time.

43 Section 71 describes the parties who may indorse and negotiate negotiable instruments. The draft Bill does not appear to provide with sufficient clearness for this matter.

44 Section 76 embodies section 23 of the draft Bill but it completes that section by enacting that an indorsement of a negotiable instrument for part of the amount due thereon transfers a right to retain the instrument and to receive and recover such part in the name of the indorser.

45 Section 77 provides that no agreement which is not expressed on the instrument or which is collateral thereto shall be binding upon holders for value or those deriving title from such holders. This section embodies and supplements the corresponding provisions of the draft Bill of which section 42 provided that the title of an indorsee should not be affected by transactions independent of the instrument, and section 99 that a holder in due course should not be affected by any agreement between two signers as to the order of their liability unless such agreement appeared on the face of the instrument. The section as now drawn extends the draft sections to holders for value and to holders deriving title from holders for value, and also extends section 99 to all agreements not expressed on the instrument.

46 Chapter V deals with presentment for acceptance and presentment for payment.

47 Section 82 states the essentials of presentment for acceptance in the case of bills payable at or after sight, to which the draft Bill, section 56, clause (1), refers as bills payable after demand. We have added a provision that presentment must be made by a person entitled to demand acceptance, and we have provided for the case in which the drawee cannot after reasonable search be found, and also for the case of a bill directed to the drawee at a particular place.

48 Section 83 provides for presentment for sight of a promissory note payable at a certain period after sight—a matter unnoticed by the draft Bill.

49 Section 84 alters section 56, clause (3), of the draft Bill by restricting the time allowed to the drawee for deliberation to the departure of the next post, if that should happen within the twenty-four hours otherwise allowed. This is the English rule upon the subject.

50 Sections 85 and 86 lay down the general rule for presentment for payment, which is not distinctly laid down in the draft Bill.

51 Section 87, as to presentment for payment of inland instruments payable after date or sight, embodies section 138 of the draft Bill, but we have excluded cheques from this section, as we have provided (section 19), in accordance with English law, that such instruments are only payable on demand.

52 Section 88 provides for presentment for payment of an inland note payable by instalments—a matter omitted from the draft Bill.

53 Section 90 modifies sections 139 and 140 of the draft Bill by requiring, in accordance with English law, that an instrument drawn or accepted payable at a specified place must,

in order to charge the maker or drawer, be presented for payment at that place. The draft Bill allows presentment to be made in such cases at the place of business or residence of the maker or acceptor

54 Section 91 embodies the general rule as to the place of presentment

55 Section 92 extends the rule in section 141 of the draft Bill as to personal presentment to the case of presentment for acceptance

56 Section 93 taken together with section 105 embodies section 101 of the draft Bill, with the modification that the presentment of a cheque must be made before the relation between the drawer and his banker has been altered to the prejudice of the drawer, or the drawer will be discharged from liability. The draft Bill discharges the drawer only to the extent of his actual loss, but, according to the English cases, he is discharged altogether by such delay, the payee of the cheque being considered as having, by such delay, treated the cheque as payment, and as thereby electing to look to the drawer alone (see Hopkins v Ware, L R 4 Ex 265)

57 Section 96 is new. It provides that presentment for acceptance or payment may be made by or to a duly authorized agent, or the representative of a deceased party or the assignee of an insolvent party

58 Section 98 states the cases in which presentment for payment is excused. It embodies sections 89 and 91 of the draft Bill, and adds the case in which the drawer could not suffer damage by want of presentment, in which case presentment is by English law not necessary as against him

59 Chapter VI treats of payment and interest. Section 100 declares that payment should be made to the holder, for payment to any other party does not of itself discharge the maker or acceptor. The next two sections, 101 and 102, provide for interest upon notes, bills and cheques, and section 103 for indemnity to the payer of an instrument lost or which cannot be produced

60 Chapter VII deals with discharge from liability on notes, bills and cheques

61 Section 104 provides for the discharge of a maker, acceptor or indorser, not only when the holder cancels the acceptor's or indorser's name, and when the maker, acceptor or indorser pays the amount due (sections 85, 86, 87, and 88 of the draft Bill), but also where the holder releases or otherwise discharges the maker, acceptor or indorser

62 Section 107 adopts the provisions of 16 & 17 Vict, c 59, section 19 by which the drawer of a cheque payable to order and purporting to be indorsed by or on behalf of the payee is discharged by payment in due course

63 To section 110, which embodies sections 109 and 110 of the draft Bill, we have added an explanation showing what are material alterations in a negotiable instrument

64 Section 111 is new, and provides that in special cases, such as that of a blank stamped instrument, an uncrossed cheque and an instrument endorsed in blank, a material alteration made by an indorsee discharges his indorser from liability to him in respect of the consideration as well as of the instrument

65 Section 113 embodies section 115 of the draft Bill and section 11 of 39 & 40 Vict, c 81, relating to crossed cheques

66 Chapter VIII treats of notice of dishonour

67 Section 116 substantially agrees with sections 125, 127 and 131 of the draft Bill, but we have altered the description of the parties to whom notice of dishonour by non-acceptance or non-payment must be given. The description now adopted is that those parties must include all whom the holder seeks to make severally liable on the instrument, and some one of any parties jointly liable, but notice to the maker, drawee or acceptor is unnecessary.

68 Section 117 collects into one section a number of provisions as to the form of notice and the mode of giving it. These provisions are scattered over sections 126, 127, 128 and 130 of the draft Bill. We have already pointed out that this section differs from the draft Bill in requiring notice to the party addressed that he will be held liable

69 Section 119 adds to section 132 of the draft Bill the provision that a party receiving notice of dishonour through his agent for presentment is entitled to the same period after such receipt for the purpose of giving notice as the holder has for giving notice

70 Section 121 describes the cases in which no notice of dishonour is necessary. These cases include, besides those of dispensation by the party entitled to notice and of inability to give the notice (which are provided for in sections 66, 67, 68, 92 and 93 of the draft Bill), the case of the drawer countermanding payment, the case where the party charged could not suffer from want of such notice, the case of an acceptor who is also a drawer, the case of a promissory note which is not negotiable, and the case in which the party knowing the facts unconditionally promises to pay the amount due on the instrument

71 Chapter IX contains the rules for noting and protest

72 Section 122 substantially corresponds with section 119 of the draft Bill, but it allows the noting to be made either upon the instrument, or upon a paper attached thereto, or partly upon each. And the rules as to noting and protest are confined to bills and notes, whereas the draft Bill extended them to cheques—an extension for which there is apparently no authority

74 In section 126 we have reproduced the provisions of Act VI of 1840, section 4, and of 2 & 3 Wm 4, c 96, as to protest for non-payment after dishonour by non-acceptance.

75 Chapter X contains rules for calculating the reasonable time for presentment for acceptance or payment, for giving notice of dishonour and for noting. We have added in section 129 a provision that, in the case of notice of dishonour, when the parties carry on business or live in the same place, such notice is given within a reasonable time if it is despatched in time to reach its destination on the day next after the day of dishonour.

76 Chapter XI deals with acceptance and payment for honour. We provide (section 131) for the case of protest for better security. In accordance with a recent case (In re Overend, Gurney and Company, L. R. 6 Eq. 344), we have declared (section 136) that the payer for honour shall have all the rights, in respect of the bill, of the holder at the time of such payment.

77 Chapter XII, which treats of compensation, retains (section 137) the provisions of the draft Bill (section 65) substantially unaltered.

78 Chapter XIII treats of foreign bills and restricts to foreign bills the section (73) of the draft Bill, which deals with the dishonour of a bill naming a drawee in case of need.

79 The provisions of chapter XIV as to international law are substantially those of the draft Bill.

80 In conclusion, we desire to express our obligations to the following honourable and learned Judges, namely, Messrs Turner, Kennedy, West and Nánábhái Haridás to the Madras Chamber of Commerce to Mr Stewart Gladstone, Mr R Stewart, Mr Dickson (late Secretary and Treasurer to the Bank of Bengal), and Mr Scrymgeour, the Calcutta Agent of the Oriental Bank Corporation. We recommend that the Bill as now altered be republished in the Gazette of India and the local Gazettes, that the opinions of the Local Governments, the High Courts and the mercantile community be invited thereon, and that its further consideration be stayed till the Council re-assembles in Calcutta.

CHAPTER II.

OF NOTES, BILLS AND CHEQUES

4. A promissory note is an instrument in writing (not being a bank note or a currency note) containing an unconditional undertaking, signed by the maker, to pay a certain sum of money only to, or to the order of, a person ascertainable when such undertaking is made, or to the bearer of the instrument

Illustrations

A signs instruments in the following terms —

- (a) "I promise to pay B or order Rs 500"
 (b) "I promise to account with B or order for Rs 500 value received by me"
 (c) "I acknowledge myself to be indebted to B in Rs 1,000, to be paid on demand, for value received"
 (d) "Mr B, I O U Rs 1,000"

The instruments respectively marked (a), (b) and (c) are promissory notes. The instrument marked (d) is not a promissory note

5. A bill of exchange is an instrument in writing (not being a cheque) containing an unconditional order, signed by the maker, directing a certain person to pay a certain sum of money only to, or to the order of, a person ascertainable when such order is given or to the bearer of the instrument

6. A cheque is an instrument in writing, containing an unconditional order, signed by the maker, directing a specified banker to pay a certain sum of money only to, or to the order of, a person ascertainable when such order is given, or to the bearer thereof

7. The maker of a bill of exchange or cheque is called the "drawer," the person thereby directed to pay is called the "drawee"

When the bill gives the name of any person in addition to the drawee to be resorted to in case of need, such person is called a "drawee in case of need"

After the drawee of a bill has signed his assent upon the bill, or if there are more parts thereof than one, upon one of such parts, and delivered the same, or given notice of such signing, to the holder or to some person on his behalf, he is called the "acceptor."

When acceptance is refused and the bill is protested for non acceptance, and any person accepts it supra protest for honour of the drawer or of any one of the indorsers, such person is called an "acceptor for honour."

The person named in the instrument, to whom or to whose order the money is by the instrument directed to be paid, is called the "payee."

8. The "holder" of a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque means any person entitled in his own name to the possession thereof and to receive or recover the amount due thereon from the parties thereto.

Where the note, bill or cheque is lost or destroyed, its holder is the person so entitled at the time of such loss or destruction.

9. "Holder in due course" means any person who became the possessor of a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque if payable to bearer, or the payee or indorsee thereof if payable to, or to the order of, a payee, for a valuable consideration before the amount mentioned in it became payable, and without having reason to believe that any defect existed in the title of the person from whom he derived his title.

10. "Payment in due course" means payment in accordance with the apparent tenor of the instrument in good faith and without negligence to any person in possession thereof under circumstances which do not afford a reasonable ground for believing that such person is not entitled to receive payment of the amount therein mentioned.

11. A promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque drawn or made in British India, and made payable in, or drawn upon any person resident in, British India shall be deemed to be an inland instrument.

12. Any such instrument not so drawn, made or made payable shall be deemed to be a foreign instrument.

13. A "negotiable instrument" means a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque expressed to be payable to, or to the order of, a specified person, or to "or order," or to the bearer thereof.

14. When a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque is transferred to any person, so as to constitute that person the holder thereof, the instrument is said to be negotiated.

15. When the maker or holder of a negotiable instrument signs the same, otherwise than as such maker, for the purpose of negotiation, on the back or face thereof or on a slip of paper annexed thereto, or so signs for the same purpose a stamped paper intended to be completed as a negotiable instrument, he is said to indorse the same, and is called the "indorser."

16. If the indorser signs his name only, the indorsement is said to be "in blank," and if he adds a direction to pay the whole or any part of the amount mentioned in the instrument to, or to the order of, a specified person, the indorsement is said to be "in full," and the person so specified is called the "indorsee" of the instrument.

17. Where an instrument may be construed either as a promissory note or bill of exchange, the holder may at his election treat it as either, and the instrument shall be thenceforward treated accordingly.

18. If the amount promised or ordered to be paid is stated differently in figures and in words, the amount stated in words shall be the amount promised or ordered to be paid.

19. A promissory note or bill of exchange, in which no time for payment is specified, and a cheque are payable on demand.

20. Where a stamped paper which is intended to be completed as a negotiable instrument, is signed and delivered by a competent person as maker, drawer, acceptor or indorser, the holder thereof may complete the same by filling up any blanks therein and the person so signing shall be liable upon such instrument in the capacity in which he signed the same, for any amount which may be specified therein not exceeding the amount covered by the stamp thereon.

Illustration

A stamped paper intended to be completed as a negotiable instrument is made payable to or order the holder of such instrument may fill up the blank with his own name, or that of any other person.

21. Where a promissory note is signed by two persons, and it appears on the face of it that one of them subscribes only to an alternative liability such one is not liable on the note as maker, but is liable as guaranteeing its payment by the maker.

22. The maturity of a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque is the date at which it is payable.

23. In a promissory note or bill of exchange the expression "at sight" means on demand. The expression "after sight" means, in a promissory note, after presentment for sight, and in a bill of exchange, after acceptance or protest for non-acceptance.

24. In calculating the date at which a promissory note or bill of exchange, made payable a stated number of months after date or after sight, or after a certain event is at maturity, the period stated shall be held to terminate on the day of the month which corresponds with the day on which the instrument is dated or presented for acceptance or sight or the event happens. If the month in which the period would terminate has no corresponding day, the period shall be held to terminate on the last day of such month.

Illustrations

(a) A negotiable instrument dated 1st February is made payable at one month after date. The instrument is at maturity on the 1st of March.

(b) A negotiable instrument dated 29th January 1877 is made payable at one month after date. The instrument is at maturity on the 28th February 1877.

(c) A negotiable instrument dated 30th August 1877 is made payable three months after date. The instrument is at maturity on the 30th November 1877.

(d) A promissory note or bill of exchange, dated 31st August 1877, is made payable three months after date. The instrument is at maturity on the 30th November 1877.

25 In calculating the date at which a promissory note or bill of exchange, made payable a certain number of days after date or after sight or after a certain event, is at maturity, the day of the date, or of presentment for acceptance or sight, or on which the event happens, shall be excluded.

26. When the day on which a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque is at maturity is not a business day, the instrument shall be deemed to be due on the next preceding business day, but if the day of maturity is a public holiday, then on the next succeeding business day.

Explanation—The expression "public holiday" includes Sundays, New-Year's day, Christmas day if either of such days falls on a Sunday, the next following Monday, Good-Friday, and any other day declared by the Local Government, by notification in the official Gazette, to be a public holiday within the meaning of this Act.

27. Until the contrary is proved, the following presumptions shall be made—

(a) that every negotiable instrument was made, of valuable consideration, negotiated and transferred for valuable consideration.

(b) that every accepted bill of exchange was accepted within a reasonable time after its date and before its maturity.

(c) that every transfer of a negotiable instrument was made before its maturity.

(d) that every promissory note or bill of exchange receipted on the back was paid by the maker or acceptor thereof respectively.

(e) that the holder of a negotiable instrument is a holder in due course.

(f) that the indorsements appearing upon a negotiable instrument were made in the order in which they appear thereon.

(g) that a lost bill of exchange, promissory note or cheque was duly stamped.

Bills in Sets.

28. Bill of exchange may be drawn in parts, each part being numbered and containing a condition that it shall continue payable only so long as the others remain unpaid. All the parts together make a set, but the whole set constitutes only one bill, and is extinguished when one of the parts, if a separate bill, would be extinguished.

Exception—When a person accepts or indorses different parts of the bill in favour of different persons, he is liable on each part as if it were a separate bill.

29 That holder of one of the parts, who first acquired title to his part, is entitled to the other parts of the same set.

Crossed Cheques

30 Where a cheque bears across its face an addition of the words "and company" or any abbreviation thereof, between two parallel transverse lines, or of two parallel transverse lines simply, either with or without the words "not negotiable," that addition shall be deemed a crossing, and the cheque shall be deemed to be crossed generally.

31 Where a cheque bears across its face an addition of the name of a banker, either with or without the words "not negotiable," that addition shall be deemed a crossing, and the cheque shall be deemed to be crossed specially, and to be crossed to that banker.

Where a cheque is crossed generally or specially, the holder may add the words "not negotiable."

Where a cheque is crossed specially, the banker to whom it is crossed may again cross it specially to another banker, his agent for collection.

33. Where a cheque is crossed generally, the banker on whom it is drawn shall not pay it otherwise than to a banker.

Where a cheque is crossed specially, the banker on whom it is drawn shall not pay it otherwise than to the banker to whom it is crossed, or his agent for collection.

34. Where a cheque is crossed specially to more than one banker, except when crossed to an agent for the purpose of collection, the banker on whom it is drawn shall refuse payment thereof.

35. Where the banker on whom a crossed cheque is drawn has paid the same in due course, the banker paying the cheque, and (in case such cheque has come to the hands of the payee) the drawer thereof, shall respectively be entitled to the same rights, and be placed in the same position in all

respects, as they would respectively be entitled to and placed in if the amount of the cheque had been paid to and received by the true owner thereof

37. A person taking a cheque crossed generally or specially, bearing in either case the words "not negotiable," shall not have, and shall not be capable of giving, a better title to the cheque than that which the person from whom he took it had

But a banker who has in good faith and without negligence received payment from a customer of a cheque crossed generally or specially to himself shall not, in case the title to the cheque proves defective, incur any liability to the true owner of the cheque by reason only of having received such payment

CHAPTER III

PARTIES TO NOTES, BILLS AND CHEQUES

38 Every person capable of contracting, according to the law to which he is subject, may bind himself and be bound by the making, drawing, acceptance, indorsement, delivery and negotiation of a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque

A minor may draw, indorse, deliver and negotiate such instruments so as to bind all parties except himself

39 Every person capable of binding himself or of being bound as in the last preceding section mentioned, may so bind himself or be bound by a duly authorized agent acting in his name

An authority to draw bills of exchange does not of itself import an authority to indorse

40. An agent who signs his name to a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque, without indicating thereon that he signs as agent, or that he does not intend thereby to incur personal responsibility, is liable personally on the instrument, except to those who know that he signed as agent, or that he had no such intention

41. Where there are several drawees of a bill of exchange who are not partners, each of them can accept it for himself, but none or them can accept it for another without his authority

of exchange or cheques, any partner may bind his firm by making, drawing, accepting, indorsing or negotiating such instruments in the name of his firm, but not otherwise

Exception—A partner may bind his firm by accepting in his own name, for partnership purposes, a bill drawn upon the firm

43 In the absence of a contract to the contrary, the provisions of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, sections 42, 43 and 45, and those of chapter XI of the same Act shall respectively apply to all joint rights and liabilities created by promissory notes, bills of exchange and cheques, and to the rights and liabilities thereon of partners

44 The drawer of a bill of exchange or cheque is bound, in case of dishonour by the drawee or acceptor thereof, to compensate the holder for any loss or damage caused thereby, provided due notice of dishonour has been given to, or received by, the drawer as hereinafter provided

45 The drawee of a bill of exchange or cheque, having sufficient funds of the drawer in his hands properly applicable to the payment of such bill or cheque, must accept the bill or pay the cheque when duly required so to do, and, in default of such acceptance or payment, must compensate the drawer for any loss or damage caused by such default

46 Except as provided in sections 39, 61, 62, 63, 79, 85, 89, 90, 104 and 109, and in the absence of a contract to the contrary,—

(a) the maker of a promissory note and the acceptor before maturity of a bill of exchange, are bound to pay the amount thereof according to the apparent tenor of the note or acceptance respectively, and

(b) the acceptor of a bill of exchange at or after maturity is bound to pay the amount thereof to the holder on demand

47 No person except the drawee of a bill of exchange, or all or some of several joint drawees, or a person named therein as a drawee in case of need, or an acceptor for honour, can bind himself by an acceptance

damage caused to him by such dishonour, provided due notice of dishonour has been given to, or received by, such indorser as hereinafter provided.

Every indorser after dishonour is liable as upon an instrument payable on demand.

Liability of prior parties to holder in due course

50 The maker of a promissory note or cheque, the drawer of a bill of exchange until acceptance, and the acceptor are, as between themselves and any other parties thereto, in the absence of any contract to the contrary between themselves and such parties, liable thereon as principal debtors, and the other parties thereto are liable thereon as sureties for them.

Maker drawer and acceptor principals

51 Every prior party to a negotiable instrument is, as between himself and the holder thereof, in the absence of any contract to the contrary between himself and the holder, liable thereon as a principal debtor, and the parties thereto subsequent to him and prior to such holder, are liable to the holder as sureties for such prior party.

Illustration

A draws a bill on B who accepts. A afterwards indorses the bill to C, C to D, and D to E. As between E and B, B is the principal debtor and A, C, and D are his sureties. As between E and A, A is the principal debtor, and C and D are his sureties. As between E and C, C is the principal debtor and D is his surety.

52 The provisions of sections 132 to 147, both inclusive, of the Indian Contract Act, 1872 shall apply to the relations of suretyship between parties to negotiable instruments.

Suretyship

53 The indorser of a negotiable instrument is not discharged from his liability thereupon by the holder having merely forbore to sue a prior party, but where the holder, without the consent of the indorser, destroys or impairs the indorser's remedy against a prior party, the indorser is discharged from liability to the holder to the same extent as if the instrument had been paid at maturity.

Discharge of indorser's liability

Illustration

A is the holder of a bill of exchange made payable to the order of B which contains the following indorsements in blank—

Second indorsement 'Peter Williams'
Third indorsement 'White and Co.'
Fourth indorsement, 'John Pozzino'

This bill A puts in suit against John Pozzino and strikes out the indorsements by Peter Williams and White and Co. A is not entitled to recover anything from John Pozzino.

Estoppel against denying original validity of instrument

Estoppel against denying capacity of payee to indorse

57 No indorser of a negotiable instrument shall, in a suit thereon by a subsequent holder, be permitted to deny the signature or capacity to contract of any prior party to the instrument.

Estoppel against denying signature or capacity of prior party

58 An acceptor of a bill of exchange is not relieved from liability, by reason that an indorsement thereon is forged, if he knew or had reason to believe such indorsement to be forged when he accepted the bill.

Acceptor bound although indorsement forged

Acceptance of bill drawn in fictitious name

60 If at any time there has been valuable consideration between any parties to a negotiable instrument for the making, drawing, acceptance, indorsement, negotiation or transfer thereof, the party receiving such consideration is, except as provided in sections 38, 62, 63, 75, 82, 83, 85, 89, 90, 93, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110 and 111, and in the absence of any contract to the contrary, liable upon the instrument to all subsequent parties thereto, and every subsequent holder is a holder for consideration.

Illustrations

(a) A indorses a bill of exchange to B at the request of C for C's account with B. B is a holder of the bill for consideration and if he indorses it as a present to D, D is a holder for consideration.

(b) A the holder of a negotiable instrument indorses it in full to B in the belief that B has done something which he has not done. B for consideration indorses the instrument in blank to C and C indorses it to D. D is a holder of the instrument for consideration.

(c) A the holder of a negotiable instrument indorses it in full to B in the belief that B has done something which he has not done. B for consideration proceeding from C indorses the instrument in blank to C and C indorses it to D. D strikes out C's indorsement. D is a holder of the instrument for consideration.

61 When there was no consideration for the making, drawing, acceptance or indorsement of a negotiable instrument, or when the consideration has wholly failed, the maker, drawer, acceptor or indorser is not liable thereon to the party in whose favour the instrument was so made, drawn, accepted or indorsed, or to any party claiming through such party, unless valuable con-

consideration moved from the claimant or from some party through whom he derives title. But the maker, drawer, acceptor or indorser is liable to compensate any subsequent party who, being liable on such instrument, pays the amount due thereon.

Explanation—The drawer of a bill of exchange stands in immediate relation with the acceptor. The maker of a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque, stands in immediate relation with the payee, and the indorser with his indorsee. Other signers may by agreement stand in immediate relation with a holder.

Illustration

A draws a bill on B for Rs. 500 payable to the order of A. B accepts the bill, but subsequently dishonours it by non payment. A sues B on the bill. B proves that it was accepted for value as to Rs. 400 and as an accommodation to the plaintiff as to the residue. A can only recover Rs. 400.

63. Where a part of the consideration for which a person signed a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque, though not consisting of money, is readily ascertainable in money, and there has been a failure of that part, the sum which a holder standing in immediate relation with such signer is entitled to receive from him, is proportionally reduced.

CHAPTER IV

OF NEGOTIATION

64. Subject to the provisions of section 79, a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque payable to bearer is negotiable by delivery thereof.

Exception—A promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque delivered on condition that it is not to take effect except in a certain event is not negotiable (except in the hands of a holder for value without notice) unless such event happens.

Illustrations

(a) A, the holder of a negotiable instrument payable to bearer, delivers it to B's agent to keep for B. The instrument has been negotiated.

(b) A, the holder of a negotiable instrument payable to bearer which is in the hands of A's banker, who is at the time the banker of B, directs the banker to transfer the instrument to B's credit in the banker's account with B. The banker does so, and accordingly now possesses the instrument as B's agent. The instrument has been negotiated, and B has become the holder of it.

66. If the holder of such an instrument as in the last preceding section mentioned, delivers it to another person without indorsing it, but with intent to transfer his title thereto, the transferee acquires by such delivery all the rights which the transferor had as holder except the right of negotiation, and he may sue upon the instrument in his own name.

67. If such transfer, as in the last preceding section mentioned, is made without indorsement a person having no reason to believe in the existence of any matter affecting the validity of the instrument or of the transfer thereof, and the instrument is thereafter avoided as against any party on account of matters prior to such transfer, the transferor is bound to return to the transferee the consideration received, provided that such return is claimed within a reasonable time.

68. The holder of a negotiable instrument indorsed in blank may, without signing his own name, by writing above the indorser's signature a direction to pay to any other person as indorsee, convert the indorsement in blank into an indorsement in full, and the holder does not thereby incur the responsibility of an indorser.

69. The indorsement of a negotiable instrument transfers to the indorsee the property therein with the right of further negotiation, but the indorsement may, by express words, be restrained to a transfer of the property without such right, or may merely constitute the indorsee an agent to indorse the instrument, or to receive its contents for the indorser, or for some other specified person.

70. The indorser of a negotiable instrument may, by express words in the indorsement, restrict or exclude the right of the indorsee to negotiate the instrument, although the instrument was, at the time of such words being written, payable to the bearer thereof.

Illustrations

B signs the following indorsements on different negotiable instruments—

- (a) 'Pay the contents to C only'
- (b) "Pay C for my use"
- (c) "Pay C or order for the account of B"
- (d) "The within must be credited to C"

These indorsements exclude the right of further negotiation by C.

- (e) 'Pay C'
- (f) "Pay C value in account with the Oriental Bank"

(g) "Pay the contents to C being part of the consideration in a certain deed of assignment executed by C to the indorser and others."

71. Every sole maker, drawer, payee or indorsee, or all of several joint makers, drawers, payees or indorsees of a negotiable instrument may, if the negotiability of such instrument has not been restricted or excluded, as in the last preceding section mentioned, indorse and negotiate the same.

Explanation—Nothing in this section enables a maker or drawer to indorse or negotiate an instrument, unless he is in lawful possession or is holder thereof, or enables a payee or indorsee to indorse or negotiate an instrument, unless he is holder thereof.

Illustration.

A bill is drawn payable to A or order. A indorses it to B, the indorsement not containing the words "or order," or any equivalent words. B may negotiate the instrument.

Where an indorser so excludes his liability and afterwards becomes the holder of the instrument, all intermediate indorsors are liable to him.

Illustrations

(a) The indorser of a negotiable instrument signs his name, adding the words—

"Without recourse to me"

Upon this indorsement he incurs no liability.

(b) A, the payee and holder of a bill of exchange, indorses it to B, and B to C. Then A indorses it back to A, each of these indorsements being in due course. A is reinstated in his former rights upon the instrument, but has not acquired any rights against B or C.

(c) A is the payee and holder of a negotiable instrument. Excluding personal liability by an indorsement "without recourse," he transfers the instrument to B, and B indorses it to C, who indorses it to A. A is not only reinstated in his former rights, but has the rights of an indorsee against B and C.

73. A holder of a negotiable instrument who derives title from a holder in due course has the rights thereon of that holder in due course.

74 A negotiable instrument indorsed in blank is payable to the bearer thereof even although originally payable to order.

75. If a negotiable instrument after having been indorsed in blank is indorsed in full, the amount of it cannot be claimed from the indorser in full, except by the person to whom it has been indorsed in full, or by one who derives title through such person.

76. Where a negotiable instrument is indorsed for part of the sum due thereon to the indorser, the indorsement transfers only a right to retain the instrument, and to receive or sue for such part in the name of the indorser.

Illustration

A person who is a creditor of A signs as acceptor a bill of exchange in A's favour for 3000 rupees. A being the holder indorses it for value to B, who is aware that the acceptor was a creditor of A. A's debt to the acceptor can not be set off against B's claim on the bill.

79. When a negotiable instrument has been obtained lost, or has been obtained by unlawful means or from any maker, acceptor or holder thereof by unlawful means, or for an illegal consideration, no possessor or indorsee, who claims through the person who so obtained the instrument, is entitled to receive the amount due thereon from such maker, acceptor or holder, or from any party prior to such holder, unless such possessor or indorsee is, or some person through whom he claims was, a holder thereof in due course.

Provided that any person who, in good faith and for valuable consideration, becomes the holder, after maturity, of a promissory note or bill of exchange made, drawn or accepted without consideration for the purpose of enabling some party thereto to raise money thereon, may recover the amount of the note or bill from any prior party.

Illustration

The acceptor of a bill of exchange when he accepted it, deposited with the drawer certain goods as a collateral security for the payment of the bill, with power to the drawer to sell the goods and apply the proceeds in discharge of the bill if it were not paid at maturity. The bill not having been paid at maturity, the drawer sold the goods and retained the proceeds, but indorsed the bill to A. A's title is subject to the same objection as the drawer's title.

81. A negotiable instrument may be negotiated (except by the maker, drawee or acceptor after maturity) until payment or satisfaction thereof by the maker, drawee or acceptor at or after maturity, but not after such payment or satisfaction.

OF PRESENTMENT

82. A bill of exchange payable at or after sight must, if no time or place is specified therein for presentment, be presented to the drawee thereof for acceptance, if he can, after reasonable search, be found, by a person entitled to demand acceptance, within a reasonable time after it is drawn, and in business hours on a business day. In default of such presentment, no party thereto is liable thereon to the person making such default.

If the drawee cannot, after reasonable search, be found, the bill is dishonoured.

If the bill is directed to the drawee at a particular place, it must be presented at that place, and if at the due date for presentment he has absconded, the bill is dishonoured.

no party thereto is liable thereon to the person making such default

84. The drawee of a bill of exchange presented to him for acceptance may retain the same until the end of twenty-four hours, or until the next post to the holder, whichever first happens, to consider whether he will accept it

Explanation—In calculating the twenty-four hours mentioned in this section, days which are not business days shall be excluded

85. Promissory notes, bills of exchange and cheques must be presented for payment to the maker, acceptor or drawee thereof respectively, by or on behalf of the holder as hereinafter provided. In default of such presentment, the other parties thereto are not liable thereon to such holder

Exception—No presentment is necessary of a promissory note payable on demand in order to charge the maker thereof

86. Presentment for payment must be made during the usual hours of business, and, if at a banker's, within banking hours

87. An inland promissory note or bill of exchange, made payable at a specified period after date or sight thereof, must be presented for payment within three days after the end of such period

88. An inland promissory note payable by instalments must be presented for payment within three days after the date fixed for payment of each instalment, and non-payment on such presentment has the same effect as non-payment of a note at maturity

89. A promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque made, drawn or accepted payable at a specified place and not elsewhere must, in order to charge any party, thereto, be presented for payment at that place

90. A promissory note or bill of exchange made drawn or accepted payable at a specified place must, in order to charge the maker or drawer thereof, be presented for payment at that place

91. A promissory note or bill of exchange, not made payable as in the last two preceding sections mentioned, must be presented for payment at one of the places specified (if any), or at the place of business (if any), or at the usual residence, of the maker, drawee or acceptor thereof, as the case may be

92. If the maker, drawee or acceptor of a negotiable instrument has no known place of business or fixed residence, and no place is specified in the instrument for presentment for acceptance or payment, such presentment may be made to him in person wherever he can be found

93. A cheque must, in order to charge the drawer, be presented at the bank upon which it is drawn within a reasonable time after it was first received from the drawer, or before the relation between the drawer and his banker has been altered to the prejudice of the drawer

94. A cheque must, in order to charge any person except the drawer, be presented within a reasonable time after receipt thereof from such person

95. A negotiable instrument payable on demand must be presented for payment within a reasonable time after it is received by the holder

96. Presentment for acceptance or payment may be made by or to the duly authorized agent of the drawee, maker or acceptor, as the case may be, or where he has died, to his legal representative, or where he has been declared an insolvent, to his assignee

97. When the holder of a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque, and the maker, acceptor or drawee reside in different places, the instrument may be forwarded by post for the purpose of being presented for payment. In such case, when there is a daily post, the instrument must be posted at some time not later than the last post on the day following that on which the holder has received such instrument, and the person receiving such instrument by the post must present it not later than the day following its receipt, where there is not a daily post, the instrument must be forwarded and presented within a reasonable time

98. No presentment for payment is necessary, and the instrument is dishonoured at the due date for presentment, in any of the following cases—

(a) if the maker, drawee or acceptor closes his place of business, or cannot after reasonable search be found, or intentionally prevents the presentment of the instrument, or access to him cannot be obtained during business hours,

(b) as against any party if, after maturity, with knowledge that the instrument has not been presented—

he makes a part payment on account of the amount due on the instrument,

or promises to pay the amount due thereon in whole or in part,

or otherwise waives his right to take advantage of any default in presentment for payment,

(c) as against the drawer, if the drawer could not suffer damage from the want of such presentment

Liability of banker for negligently dealing with bill presented for acceptance deals with or delivers back such bill as to cause loss to the holder, he must compensate the holder for such loss

OF PAYMENT AND INTEREST

100 Subject to the provisions of section 104, clause (c), payment of the amount due on a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque must, in order to discharge the maker or acceptor, be made to the holder of the instrument

101. When interest at a specified rate is expressly made payable on a promissory note or bill of exchange, interest shall be calculated at the rate specified, on the amount and from the date of the instrument, until tender or realization of the amount due thereon

102. When no rate of interest is specified in the instrument, interest on the amount thereof shall, except in cases provided for by the Code of Civil Procedure, section 532, be calculated at the rate of six per centum per annum, from the date at which the same ought to have been paid by the party charged, until tender or realization of the amount due thereon

103. Any person liable to pay, and called upon by the holder thereof to pay, the amount due on a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque is before payment entitled to have it shown, and is on payment entitled to have it delivered up, to him, or, if the instrument is lost or cannot be produced, to be indemnified against any further claim thereon against him

OF DISCHARGE FROM LIABILITY ON NOTES, BILLS AND CHEQUES

104. The maker, acceptor or indorser respectively of a negotiable instrument is discharged from liability thereon—

- (a) to a holder thereof cancelling such acceptor's or indorser's name with intent by cancellation, to discharge him, and to all parties claiming under such holder,
- (b) to a holder thereof otherwise discharging such maker, acceptor or indorser, and to all parties deriving title under such holder after notice of such discharge,
- (c) to all parties thereto, if the instrument is payable to bearer, and such maker, acceptor or indorser pays in due course the amount due thereon

106. When a cheque has not been duly presented for payment, and the drawer thereof has thereby sustained loss or damage, he is discharged from liability to the holder making default in presentment

107 Where a cheque, payable to order, purports to be indorsed by or on behalf of the payee, the drawee is discharged by payment in due course

108. If the holder of a bill of exchange acquiesces in a conditional acceptance, or one limited to part of the sum mentioned in the bill, or which substitutes a different place or time for payment, or which is not signed by all the drawees (not being partners), all previous parties whose consent is not obtained to such acceptance are discharged as against the holder and those claiming under him

109 Alterations made in a promissory note or bill of exchange by a person not a party to such note or bill have no effect upon the liability of a party who signed the instrument as maker or acceptor before such alterations were made

110 Save as provided in sections 20, 32, 68 and 108, any material alteration of a negotiable instrument renders the same void as against any party thereto at the time, and not consenting to such alteration, unless such alteration was made in order to carry out the common intention of the original parties

Explanation—The following are material alterations within the meaning of this section, namely an alteration of date, amount, or of time or place of payment, the insertion in the body of the instrument of words authorising the transfer thereof, or stating the value thereof to have been received on a particular account, the addition of a name as that of a maker or drawer, obliteration of, addition to, or alteration of, the crossing of a cheque

111. Save as last aforesaid, any such alteration as in the last preceding section mentioned, if made by an indorsee, discharges his indorser from all liability to him in respect of the instrument or the consideration thereof

112. An acceptor or indorser of a negotiable instrument is bound by his acceptance or indorsement notwithstanding any previous alteration of the instrument

113. Where a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque has been materially altered, but does not appear to have been so altered, or where a cheque has been crossed but does not appear to have been crossed, payment thereof by a person or banker liable to pay and paying the same according to the apparent tenor thereof at the time of payment and otherwise in due course, shall discharge such person or banker so paying from all liability thereon, and such payment shall not be questioned by reason of the instrument having been altered or the cheque crossed

OF NOTICE OF DISHONOUR

114 A bill of exchange is said to be dishonoured by non-acceptance when the drawee, or one of several drawees not being partners, makes default in acceptance upon being duly required to accept the bill

115 A promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque is said to be dishonoured by non-payment when the maker of the note, acceptor of the bill, or drawee of the cheque makes default in payment upon being duly required to pay the same

116 When a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque is dishonoured by non-acceptance or non-payment, the holder thereof, or some party thereto who remains liable thereon, must give notice that the instrument has been so dishonoured to all other parties whom the holder seeks to make severally liable thereon, and to some one of several parties whom he seeks to make jointly liable thereon

Nothing in this section renders it necessary to give notice to the maker of the dishonoured promissory note, or the drawee or acceptor of the dishonoured bill of exchange or cheque

117 Notice of dishonour may be given by or to a duly authorised agent of the person by or to whom it is required to be given, or, where he has died, to his legal representative, or, where he has been declared an insolvent, to his assignee, may be oral or written, may, if written be sent by post, and may be in any form, but it must inform the party to whom it is given, either in express terms or by reasonable intendment, that the instrument has been dishonoured, and in what way, and that he will be held liable thereon, and it must be given within a reasonable time after dishonour, at the place of business, or (in case such party has no place of business) at the residence, of the party for whom it is intended

If the notice is sent by post and miscarries, such miscarriage does not render the notice invalid

119 When the instrument is deposited with an agent for presentment, the agent is entitled to the same time to give notice to his principal as if he were the holder giving notice of dishonour, and the principal is entitled to a further like period to give notice of dishonour

121 No notice of dishonour is necessary—
(a) when it is dispensed with by the party entitled thereto,

(b) in order to charge the drawer, when he has countermanded payment,

(c) when the party charged could not suffer damage from want of notice,

(d) when the party entitled to notice cannot after due search be found, or the party bound to give notice is for any other reason, unable without any fault of his own to give it,

(e) to charge the drawers, when the acceptor is also a drawer,

(f) in the case of a promissory note which is not negotiable,

OF NOTING AND PROTEST

122 When a promissory note or bill of exchange has been dishonoured by non-acceptance or non-payment, the holder may cause such dishonour to be noted by a notary public upon the instrument or upon a paper attached thereto, or partly upon each

Such note must be made within a reasonable time after dishonour, and must specify the date of dishonour, the reason, if any, assigned for such dishonour, or, if not expressly dishonoured, the reason why the holder treats the instrument as dishonoured, and the notary's charges

123 When a promissory note or bill of exchange has been dishonoured by non-acceptance or non-payment, the holder may, within a reasonable time, cause such fact to be noted and certified by a notary public. Such certificate is called a protest and shall, in the absence of proof to the contrary in a suit upon the instrument, be deemed evidence of the fact of dishonour

When the acceptor of a bill of exchange has become insolvent, or his credit has been publicly impeached, before the maturity of the bill, the holder may, within a reasonable time, cause a notary public to demand better security of the acceptor, and on its being refused may, within a reasonable time, cause such facts to be noted and certified as aforesaid. Such certificate is called a protest for better security

(a) either the instrument itself, or a literal transcript of the instrument and of everything written or printed thereupon,

(b) the name of the person for whom and against whom the instrument has been protested,

(c) a statement that payment or acceptance, or better security, as the case may be, has been demanded of such person by the notary public, the terms of his answer, if any, or a statement that he gave no answer, or that he could not be found,

(d) when the note or bill has been dishonoured, the place and time of dishonour, and when better security has been refused, the place and time of refusal,

(e) the subscription of the notary public making the protest,

(f) in the event of an acceptance for honour or of a payment for honour, the name of the person by whom, of the person for whom, and the manner in which, such acceptance or payment was offered and effected

125 When a promissory note or bill of exchange is required by law to be protested, notice of such protest must be given instead of notice of dishonour, in the same manner and subject to the same conditions, but the notice may be given by the notary public who makes the protest

126 All bills of exchange drawn payable at some other place than the place mentioned in the residence of the drawee, and which are dishonoured by non-acceptance, may, without further presentment to the drawee, be protested for non-payment, in the place specified for payment, unless paid before maturity

OF REASONABLE TIME

127 In determining what is a reasonable time for presentment for acceptance or payment, for giving notice of dishonour and for noting, regard shall be had to the nature of the instrument and the usual course of dealing with respect to similar instruments, and in calculating such time, days which are not business days shall be excluded

128 Presentment is made within a reasonable time, within the meaning of sections 82, 93, 94 and 95, if it is made on the business day next after that on which the holder received the bill, negotiable instrument or cheque referred to, or when there is no more delay than is occasioned by the residence of the parties to the bill, negotiable instrument or cheque in different places

Illustration

A draws on B resident at Calcutta a bill of exchange in favour of C payable at sight and sends it to C at Benares. C the day after he receives it indorses it to D and dispatches it to D at Calcutta. D the day after he receives the bill presents it for payment. The delay which has taken place in presenting the bill is not unreasonable.

129 If the holder and the party to whom reasonable time for giving notice of dishonour is given carry on business or live (as the case may be) in different places, such notice is given within a reasonable time if it is despatched by the next post or on the day next after the day of dishonour

If the said parties carry on business or live in the same place, such notice is given within a reasonable time if it is despatched in time to reach its destination on the day next after the day of dishonour

CHAPTER XI

OF ACCEPTANCE AND PAYMENT FOR HONOUR

131 When a bill of exchange has been noted or protested for non-acceptance or for better security, any person may, with the consent of the holder, by writing on the bill, accept the same for the honour of any party thereto

132 Where the acceptance does not express for whose honour it is made, it shall be deemed to be made for the honour of the drawer

133 An acceptor for honour binds himself to all parties subsequent to the party for whose honour he accepts to pay the amount of the bill if the drawee do not, and such party, and all prior parties, are liable in their respective capacities to compensate the acceptor for honour for all loss or damage sustained by him in consequence of such acceptance

But an acceptor for honour is not liable to the holder of the bill unless it is presented, or (in case the address given by such acceptor on the bill is a place other than the place where the bill is made payable) forwarded for presentment, not later than the day next after the day of its maturity

134 An acceptor for honour cannot be charged unless the bill has at its maturity been presented to the drawee for payment and has been dishonoured by him, and noted or protested for such dishonour

135 When a bill of exchange has been noted or protested for non-payment, any person may pay the same for the honour of any party liable to pay the same, provided that the person so paying has previously declared before a notary public the party for whose honour he pays, and that such declaration has been recorded by such notary public

136 Any person so paying, as in the last preceding section provided, is entitled to all the rights, in respect of the bill, of the holder at the time of such payment, and may recover from the party for whose honour he pays all sums so paid, with interest thereon and with all expenses properly incurred in making such payment

OF COMPENSATION

137. The compensation payable in case of dishonour of a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque, by any party liable to the holder or any indorsee, shall (except in cases provided for by the Code of Civil Procedure, section 532) be determined by the following rules—

(a) The holder is entitled to the amount due upon the instrument, together with the expenses properly incurred in presenting, noting and protesting it,

(b) When the person charged resides at a place different from that at which the instrument was payable, the holder is entitled to receive such sum at the current rate of exchange between the two places,

(c) An indorser who, being liable, has paid the amount due, on the same is entitled to the amount so paid with interest at six per centum per annum from the date of payment until tender or realization thereof, together with all expenses caused by the dishonour and payment,

(e) The party entitled to compensation may draw a bill upon the party liable to compensate him, payable at sight or on demand, for the amount due to him together with all expenses properly incurred by him. Such bill must be accompanied by the instrument dishonoured and the protest thereof (if any). If such bill is dishonoured, the party dishonouring the same is liable to make compensation thereof in the same manner as in the case of the original bill

OF FOREIGN BILLS

138 Where a drawee in case of need is named in a foreign bill of exchange, the bill is not dishonoured until dishonoured by such drawee

CHAPTER XIV

OF INTERNATIONAL LAW

140 In the absence of a contract to the contrary, the liability of the maker of a foreign promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque is regulated in all essential matters by the law of the place where he made the instrument the liability of the acceptor, by the law of the place where he accepted the instrument the liability of the indorser, by the law of the place where he indorsed the instrument

Illustration

A bill of exchange was drawn by A in California where the rate of interest is 25 per cent, and accepted by B payable in Washington, where the rate of interest is 6 per cent. The bill is endorsed in British India, and is dishonoured. An action on the bill is brought against B in British India. He is liable to pay interest at the rate of 6 per cent only, but if A is charged as drawer, A is liable to pay interest at the rate of 25 per cent

141. Where a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque is made payable in a different place from that in which it is made or indorsed, the law of the place where it is made payable determines what constitutes dishonour and what notice of dishonour is sufficient

A bill of exchange drawn and indorsed in British India, but accepted payable in France is dishonoured. The indorsee causes it to be protested for such dishonour and gives notice thereof in accordance with the law of France though not in accordance with the rules herein contained in respect of bills which are not foreign. The notice is sufficient

142 If a negotiable instrument is made, drawn, accepted, or indorsed &c, out of British India but in accordance with the law of British India, the circumstance that any agreement evidenced by such instrument is invalid according to the law of the country wherein it was entered into does not invalidate any subsequent acceptance or endorsement made thereon in British India

143 Until the contrary is proved, the law of any foreign country regarding promissory notes bills of exchange and cheques shall be presumed to be the same as that of British India

In rice there is a fall of about ½ lb per rupee both in the maximum and minimum scales. In ragi the minimum rate is almost unchanged, but in the maximum there is a great fall, in Tumkūr for instance the maximum was 12 lbs per rupee and now it is 16 lbs.

4 The number of labourers on civil relief works has increased from 28,803 to 31,280, a rise of 2,477 The increase runs through all districts except those of the Nagar division, in all three of which there is an unexplained decrease In the others the increase is as follows —

| Bangalore | . | . | 236   |
| Kolar     | . | . | 568   |
| Túmkúr    | . | . | 1,946 |
| Mysore    | . | . | 128   |
| Hassan    | . | . | 926   |

But the Bangalore Deputy Commissioner in his own return shows an increase of 2,640 The discrepancy will be enquired into

5 The Public Works Department returns shew 25,271 labourers against 24,942 previously, an increase of only 329 There is a decrease everywhere except in the Bangalore district, where the large number of relief labourers put on the State Railway and the Túmkúr road brings up the total A good many of the works are on tanks and have been stopped by the water, in many cases it is reported that the labourers have left to work on their fields

6 The numbers gratuitously fed in relief camps have fallen from 208,683 to 161,892 The decrease is very general and almost universal, but it is largest in the Bangalore district and Municipality in Kolar, Túmkúr and Chitaldroog, in fact in those districts where the numbers were most overgrown

The decrease is partly due to the improvement in the prospects of field employment, and would have occurred in any case It is partly due also to the enforcing of the conditions of residence and labour, and to the effects made to relegate the paupers to works Of the numbers in the relief camps of the Bangalore Municipality, which have fallen by 19,000 in the last fortnight, over 5,000 have been put on the State Railway and the adjacent embankment, about 2,000 on the embankment of the Alsur lake, and about 1,000 more on different projects, the water works, and two lines of road The improvement in the condition of the labourers is already obvious, they are cheerful, healthy and contented, and those who a fortnight ago were thought hardly able to lift a pick-axe, are now doing a fair day's work Of the rest some have left for their villages, some prefer to beg about the town, but these will be collected and brought in by the Police To every applicant either labour or food is offered if labour cannot be provided, their food is given till the applicant can be set to work The want of tools is still one of the greatest difficulties

Further report regarding the type of fever prevailing in the Bombay Presidency during the Famine

No. 525, dated 28th September 1877

From<sup>2</sup>—DR S C TOWNSEND, Offg Sanitary Commissioner with the Govt of India, To—C BERNARD, Esq, C S I, Additional Secy to the Govt of India

I HAVE the honour to forward for the information of the Government of India, copy of a letter dated 14th instant from Doctors Lewis and Cunningham with reference to the nature of the fever prevalent in Bombay in the early months of the current year

Dated 14th September 1877

From—DOCTORS T R LEWIS AND D D CUNNINGHAM, Special Assistants to the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India, To—DR S C TOWNSEND, Offg Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India

WE have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the "extract" from paragraph 4 of a despatch from the Secretary of State to the Government of India, No 53 (Revenue), dated 26th July 1877, intimating that the further

* Report by Dr T R Lewis, dated, report promised in a communication by one of Calcutta, 16th May 1877 ourselves to your office regarding the fever then prevalent in Bombay* would be awaited

2 The proposal to submit this further report was, in great measure, made on the supposition that the statements then current regarding the wide distribution of a like fever in Madras were correct. Personal enquiry, however, † Report by Dr D D Cunningham, made it evident that fevers so far from being exceptionally severe, were decidedly in abeyance † No opportunity was therefore afforded for instituting the suggested comparisons dated Calcutta, 18th June 1877

3 We have however availed ourselves of the opportunities which the various hospitals and jails of Calcutta afford of carefully observing the forms of fever which have prevailed during this season, but as yet have not observed any which could be regarded as fairly comparable with those which were prevalent in Bombay during the earlier part of the year—the fevers here being for the most part, manifestly 'intermittents' and 'continued'

4 Since our reports were written, Surgeon-General Hunter of Bombay has submitted to the Local Government an exhaustive account of the leading features of the fever recently prevalent in that city, accompanied by numerous charts of temperature. This report corroborates the inferences which were made in the communication regarding this fever referred to in the despatch, viz, that (a) in none of the cases in which the blood-spirillum had been observed 'could the origin of the fever have been directly attributed to want,' and that (b) the clinical history of the fever presented 'no well marked feature which would be sufficient to distinguish it from the class of fevers usually referred to as 'remittents' in this country'. German authorities also state that the fever in which the blood-spirillum was originally found "manifested a distinctly remittent character" ‡

5 With regard to the first cited of these conclusions, we beg to draw special attention to the circumstance that it is in complete accordance with the experience hitherto acquired in connection with the presence of spirilla in the blood. None of the observers who detected these organisms in Europe have in the remotest manner implied that their presence in the blood was associated with want, on the contrary, Geissler expressly states that the fever in which they occur (commonly referred to in Germany as recurrent-typhus) is not a famine fever. Indeed it so happened that at the time of one of the epidemics, the wages of the labouring classes were exceptionally high §

From—LIEUT -COL H F HANCOCK, R E, Under Secy to the Govt. of Bombay,
Public Works Dept,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Public Works Dept.

I AM directed to submit for information the accompanying copy of report No 99 M A, dated 27th instant, from the Consulting Engineer for Railways, Bombay, and in inviting attention to the arrangements made for dealing with the traffic under the altered conditions which now prevail, to state that the Bombay Government will continue to do their best to keep up the daily deliveries of 300 tons on to the Nizam's line and 900 tons into Raichore, but that the tide of famine grain traffic has apparently turned towards the north instead of from the north, and that they cannot predict the result.

No. 99 M A, dated Poona, 27th September 1877

I HAVE discussed the present position of the traffic on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway with Mr Barnett, Mr Conder, Captain Oldham and Lieutenant Beauclerk, who has just returned from visiting the Jubbulpore line and Nagpore branch

It is established that—

- (1)—We cannot count on any further supplies for the famine districts from the northern lines, as the recent rise of prices in the North-West has diverted them to Cawnpore, &c.
- (2)—Grain is now being booked to the North-West Provinces from stations on the Great Indian Peninsula line between Kundwah and Bhosawul

Probably also from districts served by the Holkar State Railway.

- (3)—If high prices in the North-West continue, grain may be sent from Nagpore from Bombay, even back from Poona where large stocks have accumulated
- (4)—Very little grain is now being booked anywhere on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway for the Nizam's line or for Madras stations. There are some wagons for both places on the road, but these will soon be cleared off.
- (5)—There is a large accumulation of wagons almost all from northern lines for Sholapur

- (6)—Merchants in the Central Provinces now desire to book to—

- (a)—Bombay,
- (b)—Sholapur and Goalburga,
- (c)—Nasik, &c, .

not to Poona or Nizam's line or Raichore

- (7)—A certain number of engines will be set free for other work by—
  - (a)—the falling off in through consignments from the E. Indian Railway,
  - (b)—the reduction in booking to Nizam's line and Raichore should this reduction be permanent.

Under all these circumstances I have come to the conclusion in which I believe all those I have consulted concur that the proper course will be—to issue the notice drafted by Mr. Conder and marked A;

to restrict the general traffic to be taken from northern lines at Jubbulpore as heretofore to 40 or 50 wagons daily, and to utilise the engines set free by the cessation of famine traffic (100 wagons) heretofore received from northern lines in clearing Great Indian Peninsula stations.

This arrangement to continue so long only as the present condition of affairs remains unchanged, but it is to be distinctly understood that up to the quantities already stipulated for absolute preference is to be given to famine grain, that all the grain that can be obtained for Raichore and the Nizam's line up to the quantity promised is to be sent, and that 2,000 tons of grain are to be sent daily over the Bhoreghât so long as that quantity is worked, and the stations* to which it may be consigned can receive it.

* (N B)—Poona, Sholapur &c, owing to limited accommodation, can only unload a certain number of wagons daily

† These figures are for the weeks ending 15th and 22nd respectively. * These figures include all the labourers upon the Dhond Manmad Railway, a large number of whom are not relief but ordinary labourers. ‡ Corrected figures given. § Rates not reported. || For details and dates see table appended.

The week's telegraphic news is again satisfactory. There has now been sufficient rain for the present everywhere, except in four talukas of Khandesh, three of Nasik and one of Poona.

2. Prices are falling everywhere, and in five of the Districts—Khandesh, Ahmednagar, Sholapur, Satara and Belgaum—the improvement in this respect is very considerable.

3. The number of people upon relief works is now 182,158, which is less by 36,758 than the number for the previous week. The number quoted still includes a number of ordinary labourers upon the Dhond and Manmad Railway, the necessary information for deducting them not having been received. Dharwar is the only district in which the number of labourers on relief works shows no decrease. The Collector, however, anticipates a considerable falling off shortly. The reduction is most marked in Kaladgi.

4. Cholera continues to decrease, and has now disappeared from three of the nine districts.

5. Weekly written reports received since the date of the last Statement bring the detailed information in the case of the Nasik, Poona, Sholapur and Satara Collectories up to the 29th September, and in the case of the other five affected districts to the 22nd idem. The usual rainfall table compiled from these reports is appended. The kharif crops are in good condition everywhere, and the harvest has commenced in Ahmednagar, Satara and Kaladgi. The sowing of rabi progresses satisfactorily on the whole, though in some places in the districts to the north it is retarded for want of rain, while in Sholapur, on other hand, it is retarded by excessive rain. The cotton sown in Dharwar in August is reported to be well up and vigorous.

6. The following table gives the expenditure by Government, during the week ending 15th September, upon gratuitous relief, and in payments made to the young children of labourers employed upon relief works. Comparing the results shown in the table below with those shown in the last Statement, it will be seen that the number of persons in receipt of Government charitable relief has increased from 21,170 to 97,691, while the number of children under 7 years of age has decreased from 71,838 to 64,654. The number of people charitably relieved was 45.75 per cent of the number of labourers upon relief works during the same week.

8 Tables A and B are brought up to the week ending 22nd ultimo. The number of persons on works under Public Works Department agency in the nine affected districts was at this date 168,207, and on works under Civil agency 23,371. The percentage of persons upon works under Civil agency has thus risen during the week from 10.7 to 11.7 per cent of the whole number employed. The total expenditure upon works in the nine affected districts has amounted to Rs 97,17,101, which, with the expenditure of Rs 1,19,367 upon works in Ratnagiri and Kanara, and Rs 7,63,647 from the Collectors' discretionary allowances, gives a total of Rs 1,06,00,115.

9 Maps are not sent with this summary.

10 From the appended table showing the condition of the affected Native States it will be seen that the improvement noticed last week continues, and that prices have fallen everywhere except in Phaitan where they are stationary.

11 During the week ending 29th September, 153 tons of food-grains were exported from Bombay to the Southern Mahratta ports, and 4,342 tons were carried by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway to stations upon the Poona-Sholapur and Bhusawal-Nasik lines, making a total of 4,495 tons for the week. This is less by 746 tons than the importations of the previous week. The table below shows the quantities of grain sent by sea and rail from October 1876 till the 29th September 1877 to the Southern Mahratta ports and the Railway stations in the distressed districts. It will be seen that the total amount delivered up to the 29th September was 415,388 tons —

12 There has been a net decrease of 36,121 in the number of people upon relief works, and a decrease of 7,184 in the number of young children. There has, on the other hand, been an increase of 6,524 in the number of people on charitable relief.

13 The improvement in the general situation is more decidedly marked, but the poorer classes of the people still suffer from the prevailing high prices.

In Bengal there has been little rain in the Central districts of Bengal Proper, and more is wanted in Burdwan, Bankoora, Midnapore, Jessore, Pubna and Furreedpoie, in Orissa and Chota Nagpore rain is also required, there has been a good fall throughout Behar, and prospects have improved. In Assam there has been little rain, and none in Sylhet, prospects are good. In Burma there has been fair rain, but the Irrawaddy has again flooded some of the tracts lately replanted, and in Bassein and Henzada there will in consequence be a considerable falling off in the area cultivated. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh the whole aspect of affairs has been changed by a general and heavy fall of rain, which has secured the rabi sowings and greatly benefited the kharif crops which have survived the drought. In the Punjab there has also been general rain, except in Pesháwar and Mooltan, the prospects of the rabi have much improved.

forwarded to the depôt, Calcutta, and which should be sold by public auction to the best advantage. The proceeds of all articles sold by auction must be deposited in the nearest treasury, and the treasury receipt, with auction account sale, should be forwarded to the Accountant General to whom the accounts of such articles are rendered.

8 When instruments are received for final deposit in store, a receipt will be granted for them by the Superintendent, Mathematical Instrument Department, to enable officers from whom received, to remove them from their debit, by forwarding their receipt to the Accountant General concerned, with half-yearly or other returns of stores submitted to him.

9 All Government instruments, &c, requiring repair, &c, should be forwarded with an official letter or repair indent. If no longer required and intended to be deposited in store, it should be specifically mentioned.

10 All instruments, &c, received from England and issued on book debit on the public service, will be charged at their invoice cost, plus charges incurred in landing, storing and examining and despatching them, &c, or, when this cost cannot be ascertained, rate book prices will be charged. These are based on average rates.

11 Instruments made in the department will be charged at the actual cost, and those purchased locally for issue, at cost price, plus 10 per cent for incidental charges.

12 Instruments, when they can be spared, are sometimes issued to officers and others on payment of the cost value, plus 20 per cent, and instruments, the private property of officers, are repaired, if necessary, on like terms. In such cases the amount must be remitted to the Superintendent, Mathematical Instrument Department, before the instruments can be despatched from the Office of the Superintendent.

13 Instruments returned into store will be valued according to their condition.

14 It is particularly requested that sizes and sorts of instruments, length of scales, how divided, and purposes for which required, and generally any information which will guide this department in knowing, without further reference, the exact wants of the indenting officer, be put as far as possible on face of indent, instead of in covering letters.

15 The following list shows nomenclature of the various descriptions of instruments ordinarily kept in store of this department for issue on public service. This nomenclature, it is especially necessary, should be adopted in all indents.

16 To enable the indenting officer, as well as the officer who countersigns and finally passes in indent, to know the cost involved thereby, the average ordinary price of each description of instrument is also given in the annexed list. Indenting Officers must invariably enter the value of all instruments required by them in column of indent allotted to the purpose.

17 The supply should be regulated, not according to what an Officer would like to have, but by what is absolutely necessary.

(c) of a contract of lease—according to the aggregate amount of the fine or premium (if any), and of the rent agreed to be paid during the first year of the term

(d) of an award—according to the amount or value of the property in dispute

xi. In the following suits between landlord and tenant, (namely)—

57. Notwithstanding anything herein contained, throughout the territories subject to the Governor of Fort St. George in Council, the fees payable in suits by Government ryots for the recovery of land sold for arrears of revenue shall not exceed the amount which would be payable if the value of the subject-matter were only the rent of the land payable for the year next before the date of presenting the plaint

Fee on memorandum of appeal against order relating to compensation, on a memorandum of appeal against an order relating to compensation under any Act for the time being in force for the acquisition of land for public purposes shall be computed according to the difference between the amount awarded and the amount claimed by the appellant

59. If the Court sees reason to think that the annual nett profits or the market-value of any such land, house or garden as is mentioned in section 56, clauses v and vi, have or has been wrongly estimated, the Court may, for the purpose of computing the fee payable in any suit therein mentioned, issue a commission to any proper person directing him to make such local or other investigation as may be necessary, and to report thereon to the Court.

may in its discretion refund the excess paid as such fee but if the estimation has been insufficient, the Court shall require the plaintiff to pay so much additional fee as would have been payable had the said market-value or nett profits been rightly estimated

In such case the suit shall be stayed until the additional fee is paid. If the additional fee is not paid within such time as the Court shall fix, the suit shall be dismissed.

61. In suits for mesne profits or for immoveable property and mesne profits, or for an account, if the profits or amount decreed are or is in excess of the profits claimed or the amount at which the plaintiff valued the relief sought, the decree shall not be executed until the difference between the fee actually paid and the fee which would have been payable had the suit comprised the whole of the profits or amount so decreed shall have been paid to the proper officer

When the amount of mesne profits is left to be ascertained in the course of the execution of the decree, if the profits so ascertained exceed the profits claimed, the further execution of the decree shall be stayed until the difference between the fee actually paid and the fee which would have been payable had the suit comprised the whole of the profits so ascertained is paid. If the additional fee is not paid within such time as the Court shall fix, the suit shall be dismissed

Where any suit or appeal in which any such question has arisen comes before a Court of appeal, reference or revision, and such Court considers that the said question has been wrongly decided, to the detriment of the revenue, it shall require the party by whom such fee has been paid to pay so much additional fee as would have been payable had the question been rightly decided, and the provisions of the second paragraph of section 60 shall apply

63. When any appeal is presented to a civil Court, not against the whole of a decision, but only against so much thereof as relates to a portion of the subject-matter of the suit, the memorandum of appeal shall be chargeable with the fee which would have been payable if the subject-matter had been such portion only, and, if on the hearing of such appeal, the respondent takes, under section 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure, an objection to any part of the said decision other than the part appealed against, the Court shall not hear such objection until the respondent shall have paid the additional fee which would have been payable had the appeal comprised the part of the decision so objected to

suits embracing separately each of such subjects would be liable under this Act

Nothing in the former part of this section shall be deemed to affect the power conferred by the Code of Civil Procedure, section 45

65 No document mentioned in Schedule IV or Schedule V and requiring an adhesive stamp under the rules for the time being in force under this Act shall be filed or acted upon in any proceeding in any Court or office until the stamp has been cancelled in manner prescribed by such rules

67 Whenever an application or petition containing a complaint or charge of an offence other than an offence for which police officers may arrest without warrant, is presented to a criminal Court, the Court, if it convict the accused person, shall, in addition to the penalty imposed upon him, order him to repay to the complainant the fee paid on such application or petition

In the case mentioned in section 66, the Court, if it convict the accused person, shall, in addition to the penalty imposed upon him, order him to repay to the complainant the fee, if any, paid by the latter for the examination

When the complainant has paid fees for serving processes in either of the cases mentioned in the first and second paragraphs of this section, the Court, if it convict the accused person, shall, in addition to the penalty imposed upon him, order him to repay such fees to the complainant

All fees ordered to be repaid under this section may be recovered as if they were fines imposed by the Court

PROBATES, LETTERS OF ADMINISTRATION AND CERTIFICATES OF ADMINISTRATION

68. Where any person on applying for the probate of a will or letters of administration has estimated the property of the deceased to be of greater value than the same has afterwards proved to be, and has consequently paid too high a court-fee thereon, if within six months after the true value of the property has been ascertained, such person produces the probate or letters to the Court by which the probate or letters has or have been granted, and delivers to such Court a particular inventory and valuation of the property of the deceased, verified by affidavit or affirmation,

and if such Court is satisfied that a greater fee was paid on the probate or letters than the law required,

the said Court may at its discretion—

(a) cancel the stamp on the probate or letters, if such stamp has not been already cancelled,

(b) order that another stamp be substituted for denoting the court-fee which should have been paid thereon; and

such Court that an executor or administrator has paid debts due from the deceased to such an amount as,

being deducted out of the amount or value of the estate, reduces the same to a sum which, if it had been the whole gross amount or value of the estate, would have occasioned a less court-fee to be paid on the probate or letters of administration granted in respect of such estate than has been actually paid thereon under this Act,

the Court may order the amount of the difference to be refunded, provided the same be claimed within three years after the date of such probate or letters.

But when, by reason of any legal proceeding, the debts due from the deceased have not been ascertained and paid, or his effects have not been recovered and made available, and in consequence thereof the executor or administrator is prevented from claiming the return of such difference within the said term of three years, the Court may allow such further time for making the claim as may appear to be reasonable under the circumstances.

70 Whenever a grant of probate or letters

Relief in case of several grants

of administration has been or is made in respect of the whole of the property belonging to an estate, and the full fee chargeable under this Act has been or is paid thereon, no fee shall be chargeable under the same Act when a like grant is made in respect of the whole or any part of the same property belonging to the same estate.

Whenever such a grant has been or is made in respect of any property forming part of an estate, the amount of fees then actually paid under this Act shall be deducted when a like grant is made in respect of property belonging to the same estate, identical with or including the property to which the former grant relates.

71 The probate of the will, or the letters of

administration of the effects, of any person deceased, heretofore or hereafter granted, shall be deemed valid and

available by his executors or administrators for recovering, transferring or assigning any moveable or immovable property whereof or whereto the deceased was possessed or entitled, either wholly or partially as a trustee, notwithstanding the amount or value of such property is not included in the amount or value of the estate in respect of which a court-fee was paid on such probate or letters of administration.

72. When any person on applying for probate

in consequence paid too low a court-fee thereon, the Court by which the probate or letters has or have been granted, may, on the value of the estate of the deceased being verified by affidavit or affirmation, cause the probate or letters of administration to be duly stamped on payment of the full court-fee which ought to have been originally paid thereon in respect of such value, and of the further penalty, if the probate or letters is or are produced within one year from the date of the grant, of five times, or if it or they is or are produced after one year from such date, of twenty times, such proper court-fee, without any deduction of the court fee originally paid on such probate or letters.

Provided that, if the application be made within six months after the ascertainment of the true value of the estate and the discovery that too low a court-fee was at first paid on the probate or letters, and if the Court is satisfied that such fee was paid in consequence of a mistake or of its not being known at the time that some particular part of the estate belonged to the deceased, and without any intention of fraud or to delay the payment of the proper court-fee, the Court may remit the said penalty, and cause the probate or letters to be duly stamped on payment only of the sum wanting to make up the fee which should have been at first paid thereon.

too low a court-fee has been paid at first, the said authority shall not cause the same to be duly stamped in

manner aforesaid until the administrator has given such security to the Court by which the letters of administration have been granted as ought by law to have been given on the granting thereof in case the full value of the estate of the deceased had then been ascertained.

74 Where too low a court-fee has been paid

Executors, &c, not paying full court fee on probates, &c within six months after discovery of underpayment

part of the estate belonged to the deceased, if any executor or administrator acting under such probate or letters does not, within six months after the discovery of the mistake or of any effects not known at the time to have belonged to the deceased, apply to the said authority and pay what is wanting to make up the court-fee which ought to have been paid at first on such probate or letters, he shall forfeit the sum of one thousand rupees and also a further sum at the rate of ten rupees per cent on the amount of the sum wanting to make up the proper court-fee.

75 When any Court orders under this

chapter any stamp to be substituted or amount to be refunded, such stamp or amount shall be delivered or paid by any Collector to the person producing the Court's order or certificate authorizing such delivery or payment.

mutandis, apply to certificates granted under Act No XL of 1858 (for making better provision for the care of the persons and property of Minors in the Pre*endency of Fort William in Bengal), or Act No XXVII of 1860 (for facilitating the collection of debts on successions, and for the security of parties paying debts to the representatives of deceased persons), or Act No XX of 1864 (for making better provision for the care of the persons and property of Minors in the Presidency of Bombay), or Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827 (to provide for the formal recognition of Heirs, Executors and Administrators, and for the appointment of Administrators and Managers of property by the Courts), and to the holders of such certificates*

CHAPTER X

77. Subject to such rules as may from time to time be made by the Governor

Allowance for spoiled stamps.

General in Council as to the evidence, by affidavit or otherwise, which the Collector may require, allowance shall be made by the Collector for stamps spoiled in the cases hereinafter mentioned (that is to say) —

(1) The stamp on any paper inadvertently and undesignedly spoiled, obliterated, or by any means rendered unfit for the purpose intended, before any instrument written thereon is executed by any party, and for which stamp no money or other consideration has been paid or given to the attorney, pleader, or other person employed to transact the business intended to have been carried into execution thereby, or to the person by whom the same was written

(2) Any adhesive stamp which has never been used or affixed to any paper, but which has been inadvertently and undesignedly spoiled or rendered unfit for use

(3) The stamp used or intended to be used for any bill of exchange or promissory note, signed by or on behalf of the drawer or intended drawer, but not delivered out of the hands to the payee or intended payee, or any person on his behalf, or deposited with any person as a security for the payment of money, or in any way negotiated, issued, or put in circulation, or made use of in any other manner whatever, and which being a bill of exchange has not been accepted by the drawee, and provided that the paper on which any such stamp is impressed does not bear any signature intended as or for the acceptance of any bill of exchange to be afterwards written thereon

(4) The stamp used or intended to be used for any bill of exchange or promissory note signed by or on behalf of the drawer thereof, but which from any omission or error has been spoiled or rendered useless, although the same, being a bill of exchange, may have been presented for acceptance or accepted or endorsed, or being a promissory note, may have been delivered to the payee, provided that another completed and duly stamped bill of exchange or promissory note is produced identical in every particular, except in the correction of such error or omission as aforesaid, with the spoiled bill or note

(5) The stamp used for any of the following instruments, that is to say —

(a) an instrument executed by any party thereto, but afterwards found to be absolutely void in law from the beginning

(b) an instrument executed by any party thereto, but afterwards found unfit by reason of any error or mistake therein for the purpose originally intended.

(c) an instrument executed by any party thereto, but which by reason of the death of any person by whom it is necessary that it should be executed, without having executed the same, or of the refusal of any such person to execute the same, or to advance any money intended to be thereby secured, cannot be completed so as to effect the intended transaction in the form proposed

(e) an instrument executed by any party thereto, which by reason of the refusal of any person to act under the same, or by the refusal or non acceptance of any office thereby granted totally fails of the intended purpose

(f) an instrument executed by any party thereto, which for want of registration within the time required by law becomes null and void

(g) an instrument executed by any party thereto, which becomes useless as a consequence of the transaction intended to be thereby effected being effected by some other instrument duly stamped

(1) that in the case of an executed instrument,

(a) that instrument is given up to be cancelled

(b) the application for relief is made within six months after the date of the instrument, or, if it is not dated, within six months after the execution thereof by the person by whom it was first or alone executed, except where from unavoidable circumstances any instrument for which another instrument has been substituted cannot be given up to be cancelled within the aforesaid period, and in that case within six months after the date or execution of the substituted instrument, and except where the spoiled instrument has been sent abroad, and in that case within six months after it has been received back in any part of British India

(2.) that in the case of stamped paper, not having any executed instrument written thereon, and of an adhesive stamp not affixed to any material, the application for relief is made within six months after the stamp has been spoiled as aforesaid

for an instrument liable to any duty a stamp of greater value than was necessary, or has inadvertently used any stamp for an instrument not liable to any duty, the Collector may, on application made within six months after the date of the instrument, or, if it is not dated, within

six months after the execution thereof by the person by whom it was first or alone executed, and upon the instrument, if liable to any duty, being re-stamped with the proper duty, cancel and allow as spoiled the stamp so misused

79. In any case in which allowance is made for spoiled or misused stamps the Collector may give in lieu thereof other stamps of the same denomination and value, or, if required, and he thinks proper, stamps of any other denomination to the same amount in value, or, at his discretion, the same value in money, deducting the proper allowance on the purchase from Government of stamps of the like description

80 When any person is possessed of a stamp which has not been spoiled or rendered unfit or useless for the purpose intended, but for which he has no immediate use, the Collector may, if he in his discretion think fit, repay to the applicant the amount or value of such stamp in money, deducting the proper discount, upon his delivering up the stamp to be cancelled, and proving to the Collector's satisfaction that it was purchased by the applicant with a bonâ fide intention to use it, and that he has paid the full value thereof without any deduction (except only the amount of such discount), and that the stamp was so purchased within the period of six months next preceding the application

81 If a plaint or appeal which has been rejected by the lower Court on any of the grounds mentioned in the Code of Civil Procedure is ordered to be received, or if a suit is remanded in appeal, on any of the grounds mentioned in section 562 of the same Code, for a second decision by the lower Court, the appellate Court may grant to the appellant a certificate, authorizing him to receive back from the Collector the full amount of fee paid on the memorandum of appeal

Provided that, if, in the case of a remand in appeal, the order of remand does not cover the whole of the subject-matter of the suit, the certificate so granted shall not authorize the appellant to receive back more than so much fee as would have been originally payable on the part or parts of such subject-matter in respect whereof the suit has been remanded

82 When an application for a review of judgment is presented on or after the nineteenth day from the date of the decree, the Court, unless the delay was caused by the applicant's laches, may, in its discretion, grant him a certificate authorizing him to receive back from the Collector so much of the fee paid on the application as exceeds the fee which would have been payable had it been presented before such day

83 When an application for a review of judgment is admitted, and on the re-hearing, the Court reverses or modifies its former decision on the ground of mistake in law or fact, the applicant shall be entitled to a certificate from the Court authorizing him to receive back from the Collector the fee paid on the application

But nothing in the former part of this section shall entitle the applicant to such certificate where the reversal or modification is due, wholly or in part, to fresh evidence which might have been produced at the original hearing.

84 When a plaint disclosing a reasonable case on the merits is presented to any civil Court in such a form that the Judge rejects it, not for any substantial defect, but on account of a purely technical error in form only, and so as to leave the plaintiff free to prosecute the same case in another form against the same defendant, the value of the stamp on the plaint shall be refunded to the plaintiff on his presenting an application to the Collector of the District in which the Court is situate, together with a certificate from the Judge who rejected the plaint, that it was rejected under the circumstances above described and that in his opinion the value of the stamp should be refunded

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

The provisions of the law relating to stamp-duties and Court-fees are now contained in six different Acts, and numerous orders of the Governor General in Council notified from time to time in the Government Gazette during the last seven years. It is desirable for the convenience of the public to bring these provisions within the compass of a single enactment, and it is proposed to take this opportunity to introduce measures for the improved working of the law, which experience has shown to be much needed, and at the same time to provide for the acquisition of a moderate increase of revenue from stamp-duties.

2 Such increase is to be obtained partly by the amendment of those provisions of the law which are specially designed to protect the revenue from loss through evasion of the payment of the proper stamp-duty, and partly by the enhancement of the present rates of duty in certain cases.

3 There is reason to believe that the obligation of stamping documents at the time of their execution is at present largely evaded. Prosecutions for such evasion are rarely resorted to, and the criminal penalties provided by the existing law may be said to be almost inoperative, so that frauds upon the revenue are systematically practised in the belief that the worst result to be apprehended from their detection is the levy of a fine of a certain fixed amount, in addition to the unpaid duty. The most important object to be kept in view consequently in the framing of a new Stamp Bill is to stop, as far as may be practicable, every hole of escape from the liability which the law imposes upon the executant of instruments subject to stamp-duty.

5 It has been shown that, in the present state of the law, the obligation to see that all documents produced in Courts and public offices are properly stamped is generally ignored unless and until the parties producing them desire to put the documents in evidence. It is not an uncommon thing for persons to produce documents improperly stamped, and on being told that they will have to pay a specified amount by way of penalty, to withdraw the documents and forego putting them in evidence, and in such cases they are allowed to escape punishment.

or the offence which they have committed in not stamping or sufficiently stamping their instruments, and which is not the less an offence against the law and punishable as such, whether they wish to use the instrument or not

6. Further, where the presiding Judge or officer does take cognizance of the omission to use a proper stamp, some difficulty is found in securing the due punishment of the offender owing to the obscure and somewhat conflicting provisions of the existing law as to the constitution of an "offence." Whilst, on the one hand, the criminal penalty is declared to be incurred upon the mere fact of under-stamping, on the other the provisions relating to the procedure to be followed on the production of unstamped documents deal prominently with the question of intention on the part of the producer, and the Courts generally ignore the presumption of fraudulent intention in the absence of proof of the existence of such intention. As such proof is not forthcoming, the producer of the instrument almost invariably escapes, mulcted only in the civil penalty which the Court is empowered to levy at its own discretion and without reference to other authority

8 Section 37 contains an entirely new provision and one that seems likely to stimulate the production of instruments liable to stamp-duty and not properly stamped

It frequently happens that the person interested in putting in evidence an insufficiently stamped document was not bound by law to bear the expense of the stamp that should have been used at the time of its execution, yet he has to bear the penalty incurred through the laches of the actual defaulter. As a consequence of this state of the law, the person interested in producing the document is often deterred from so doing by the consideration of the penalty. In such cases it cannot be doubted that production will be greatly facilitated by the provisions of this section which enable the producer to throw the cost of producing the unstamped or improperly stamped document upon another person

9 Important changes are proposed in regard to some of the instruments chargeable with ad valorem duties specified in the first Schedule, namely, Bills of Exchange payable otherwise than on demand, Bonds, Conveyances, Policies of Insurance and other instruments such as Promissory Notes, Leases and Mortgage deeds which are subject to the same duties as Bills of Exchange, Bonds and Conveyances respectively

10 Under the present law all Bonds and Conveyances in which the amount secured, or consideration stated, ranges between Rs 50 and Rs 10,000, and other instruments similarly chargeable, are subject to rates of stamp-duty equivalent to 1 and  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent, respectively, on the maximum amount of each step in the scale of ascents by which the assessment is regulated. So far, with one exception only, to be presently stated, the sliding scale of rates of stamp-duty follow the plan of the English stamp law, but the tax is as much heavier in proportion in this country as the rupee, half rupee, quarter rupee and one anna respectively exceed in value the shilling, its half and quarter, and one penny. The exception adverted to is that, whereas in the English scale of ascents there is no intermediate step between £100 and £200 or £200 and £300, and so on, in the Indian stamp law the ascents between Rs 1,000 and Rs 10,000 are by steps of Rs. 500

11 When the amount involved in the instrument chargeable with stamp-duty exceeds Rs 10,000, the percentage of charge is, by the present stamp law in this country, diminished as the amount upon which the duty is assessed increases, whereas under the English law the same proportion of charge is maintained throughout, whatever may be the amount of the subject-matter of the instrument liable to stamp-duty

12. The rates of stamp-duty also charged on Bills of Exchange and Promissory Notes other than those payable on demand are, relatively to the duties chargeable on Bonds and Conveyances under the Indian stamp law, lower than the English rates. For, whilst the stamp law in England imposes on Conveyances, Bonds and Bills of Exchange the duty of 12s., 6s., and about 1½d. for every £10, here the rates on those three classes of instruments are 16 annas, 8 annas and about 1 anna for every Rs 100 respectively

13 The principle of the changes now proposed may be said to be the equalisation of the existing rates of percentage of duty upon the amount taxed and their adjustment to the English standard—the rupee and its halves and quarters being taken as the equivalent of the shilling and its halves and quarters respectively, and the anna as equal to the penny

15 The minimum rate of stamp-duty now payable in the case of Bonds is to be omitted. It is thought that all instruments of this class—however low may be the amount involved—can without any hardship bear a four annas tax, whilst so comparatively numerous are the Bonds or other instruments of obligation in respect of amounts not exceeding twenty-five rupees that the additional rate of two annas to which it is proposed to subject them is likely to produce a material increase of revenue.

16. It is proposed to include Policies of Insurance on life in the general class of instruments of insurance liable to stamp-duty, and to double the existing rates of charge on these instruments generally; this change is in fact nothing more than a reversion to the rates chargeable on these documents previously to the passing of the Stamp Act of 1869. Then there was no exception in favour of Life Policies, and instruments of insurance generally were charged at the rate of 8 annas per Rs 1,000 of the amount insured.

17. Instruments guaranteeing the repayment of loans made upon the deposit of valuable securities are by the present law subjected to a small fixed duty of two rupees only, without reference to the amount of the loan or the extent of the accommodation obtained through the transaction. It seems more equitable and consistent with the general principles which govern the determination of stamp duties that these instruments should be taxed according to the amount involved in the transaction, hence it is proposed to substitute an ad valorem for a fixed duty, and, having regard to the short period for which the loan is granted, to assess the new duty at one-half of the rate applicable to Bills of Exchange.

18. The Bill provides also for the revival of the rule, in regard to the duty leviable on certain promissory notes, which was in force previous to the passing of the Stamp Act of 1869, under which a promissory note made payable at some time exceeding one year from the date of the note was liable to the same rate of duty as a Bond. As the obligatory instrument ordinarily executed in this country when loans are taken—the “tamassuk”—is more of the nature of a promissory note than a bond, it seems probable that some unnecessary sacrifice of revenue has resulted from the relinquishment of the former mode of assessment to which it is now proposed to revert in these cases.

19. The limit of amount within which cheques and other orders for the payment of money and receipts are exempted from any stamp-duty is to be reduced from twenty to ten rupees. The payment of one anna stamp-duty can hardly be considered an oppressive tax in such cases, whilst so comparatively numerous are the transactions of this kind involving small amounts, that the abolition of the exemption in respect of sums ranging between twenty and ten rupees is likely to secure a considerable increase of revenue. Further, the Bill aims at the enforcement of the delivery of a receipt for the payment of any amount in excess of ten rupees in satisfaction of a debt. Under the present law a person receiving money in payment of a debt above a certain amount is obliged to grant a receipt to the payer if the latter demands it. This enactment has been found by experience to attain its object but very imperfectly, as the payers are generally too indifferent about the matter to exercise their legal right, and consequently the payee it is believed, in a large number, if not the majority, of cases, escapes his obligation. As the obligation was imposed solely in the interest of the revenue, the principle on which it rests is not overstrained by the provision of the Bill which, upholding the obligation of the payee, dispenses with the antecedent condition for its enforcement.

20. The duty chargeable on instruments evidencing an appraisement or an award is raised by the Bill to about five times its present amount. Before 1869, these documents were not subject to any stamp-duty; the tax then imposed was purely experimental. The increase now proposed still leaves instruments of this description more lightly taxed than they are in England.

21. The Bill substitutes an ad valorem rate of duty for the fixed amount now chargeable on Partition-deeds. That amount is Rs 16 and in some cases proves such a heavy tax that the matter has been made the subject of a reference to Government, an equal charge on all partitions without reference to the value of the property divided must work unsatisfactorily. An ad valorem duty is a more equitable form of charge, and the rate has been assimilated to that of bonds, which is one-half of the rate to which ordinary deeds of conveyance are subject.

22. An ad valorem charge is also proposed in lieu of a fixed duty for instruments of gift and exchange. All fixed duties are more or less objectionable, as they must either be pitched so low as to bring in no appreciable amount of revenue, or they must press with undue severity in cases in which the property concerned is of inconsiderable value. The difficulty of imposing ad valorem duties in these cases arises out of the want of a safe basis for their assessment, there being no consideration expressed in the instruments to be charged. It is proposed to surmount this difficulty by imposing on the parties the obligation of stating truly—under heavy penalties for fraudulent statements—the approximate value of the subject of the deed of gift or exchange.

23. The stamp-duties heretofore chargeable on pleaders' and mukhtars' certificates under the Pleader's Act are included in the Bill as part of the scheme of consolidation. It seems only just and consistent that advocates and attorneys should be similarly taxed in respect of the practice of their profession in the Courts of this country, and it is proposed to subject them to the payment of five hundred rupees, and two hundred and fifty rupees stamp-duty, respectively, on their enrolment as advocates and attorneys of a High Court. The members of the faculty practising in the Courts of England, Ireland and Scotland are somewhat similarly taxed in respect of such practice.

25. The new rates for Small Cause Court suits involve a decrease of  $2\frac{1}{2}$  per cent in the case of suits of this class instituted in the Presidency Towns, and a proportionate increase of the rates heretofore obtaining in such Courts situated outside those towns.

The present rates in the Presidency Towns are 2 annas per rupee or  $12\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. Elsewhere they are the same as in other Courts, namely,  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent on the average amount involved in the suit. The town rate is clearly too high and some relief is called for. This, it is thought, may be unobjectionably given by the application of the equalisation principle, and the enhancement of the rate heretofore levied in the Mufassal Small Cause Court is defensible on the ground that, as the judicial agency and general machinery of these Courts is more costly than those of the ordinary Civil Courts, whilst a complete determination of the matter in dispute is obtained in the one class of Courts and not in the other, equitable considerations admit of a higher rate of charge upon the litigants in the former case than in the latter.

26 Up to 1870 no stamp-duty was charged on Letters of Administration to the effects of deceased persons or Probates of Wills. The rate of duty then fixed was tentative and expressly declared to be subject to revision on the occasion of the next amendment of the law on the subject, it is now proposed to increase it from two, to two and a half per centum.

27 The fees now chargeable for the service of processes issuing from the Civil, Revenue and Criminal Courts are fixed by rules framed by the High Courts. It is proposed to substitute for this procedure the fixed rates specified under Nos 20 and 21 of the fifth schedule of the Bill, and to discontinue the provisions of the existing law for the regulation of the process-serving establishments.

The experience gained through the working of the present system, as to the actual cost of serving processes, renders possible the determination of the amount of the fee required in the case of each kind of process to cover the cost of its service, and it seems desirable not only that the Court fees of this class should, like all other fees leviable under the Court-fees Act, be fixed by the Act itself, but that the regulation of the establishments to be maintained for the service of processes should be under the exclusive control of the Executive authorities.

28 It is often asserted that the provisions of the stamp law are so complicated as to be ill-understood by the public generally, and on this ground a disposition has been shown sometimes on the part of the administrators of the law to excuse, or take a very lenient view of, non-compliance with its requirements, the Bill has been framed therefore with the special endeavour to render the requirements of the law generally intelligible, by large additions to the interpretation-clauses, improved arrangement of its provisions and a simpler classification of the contents of the schedules.

29 The other alterations of the existing law contained in the Bill relate chiefly to matters of detail or procedure, and of minor importance, and do not appear to call for any special explanation.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 10th October 1877, and was referred to a Select Committee —

No 17 of 1877

A Bill to enable the District Judges of the Presidency of Port Saint George to suspend and remove certain ministerial officers, and for other purposes

Whereas it is expedient to empower the District Judges of the Presidency of Port Saint George to suspend and remove ministerial officers of the Courts of Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs; and whereas it is also expedient to provide for the transfer of ministerial officers from one Court to another, It is hereby enacted as follows —

1 For section 23 of the Madras Civil Courts Act, 1873, the following shall be substituted (that is to say) —

“ 23. The ministerial officers of the Courts of the Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs shall be appointed by such Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs, respectively, subject to the approval or confirmation of the District Judge within whose jurisdiction such Courts are situate, and may be suspended or removed from office either by the said District Judge or (subject to his approval or confirmation) by such Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs respectively.”

2 After section 24 of the same Act, the following section shall be inserted —

“ 24 A The Local Government may, at the instance of the District Judge, transfer from any Court, except the High Court, to any other Court, except the High Court, all or any of the ministerial officers of the Court of such Judge, or of any Subordinate Judge or District Munsif under his control

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

The Madras Government and the Madras High Court desire that the District Judges should have the power of suspending or removing ministerial officers of the Courts of the Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs in addition to the power which they now possess under Act III of 1873, section 23 of approving and confirming those officers. The first section of the Bill is intended to effect this object.

Powers, resembling those conferred by Act VI of 1871, section 37, are also given to transfer ministerial officers from one Court to another.

The following preliminary Report of a Select Committee, together with the Bill as settled by them, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 10th October 1877 —

We, the undersigned members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to define and amend the law relating to Promissory Notes, Bills of Exchange and Cheques was referred, have considered the papers specified in the appendix, and have the honour to present this preliminary report

2 This Bill, of which a draft, hereinafter called the draft Bill, was prepared by the late Indian Law Commission, is intended to be one of the chapters of the Indian Civil Code, and was introduced and referred to a Select Committee in December 1867. The then mercantile members of Council, while admitting the desirability of codification, objected to the draft Bill on account of its deviations from English law. In order to obviate this objection several alterations have now been made in its substantial provisions. The Bill has also been rearranged, and some additions have been made in order to supply omissions. These changes, which embody most of the suggestions contained in the papers mentioned in the appendix, will appear in detail from this report

4 The draft Bill provided that an indorsee for value after maturity should have only the rights of his indorser. This does not except the case of a bill of exchange drawn or accepted for the purpose of enabling some party thereto to raise money thereon. We have added an exception in section 80 in order to meet this case

5. The draft Bill discarded days of grace. We have recognised this usage in sections 87 and 88 of the present Bill. The change has involved (in section 22) a slight alteration of the definition of "maturity"

6 The draft Bill also made all instruments which fell due upon a holiday payable on the next succeeding business day instead of, as in English law, on the next preceding business day, except in the case of a public holiday. We have in section 26 adhered to the English law, and have provided that, besides the usual public holidays, such days shall be public holidays within the meaning of the Act as the Local Government may declare

7 The draft Bill made no provision for the case in which interest at a specified rate is expressly made payable on a note or bill. It merely provided that interest at the current rate should be payable on a bill dishonoured by non-acceptance, but only from the maturity of the instrument. The same rule was adopted in the case of dishonour by non-payment of a note, bill or cheque. We have substituted the English law on this subject by declaring (section 101) that, where interest is expressly provided for in the note or bill, it shall be calculated, as against all parties, at the specified rate from the date of the instrument until tender or realization of the amount due. Where no interest is specified we have declared (section 101), that, except in cases within section 532 of the Civil Procedure Code, interest shall run at six per cent per annum from the date at which the amount ought to have been paid by the party charged. We have also added an explanation that an indorser can only be charged with such interest from the date of the receipt by him of notice of dishonour

8 We have restored (section 117) the rule, which the draft Bill omitted, that a notice of dishonour must inform the party to whom it is given that he will be held liable

9 The draft Bill provided that when a note, bill or cheque had been lost, or would not be produced by the owner, he might nevertheless enforce his claim against the maker or acceptor if he gave security, to the satisfaction of the Court, to indemnify the defendant against the claims of any other person upon the instrument. No provision was made for an action against the indorser. The English law, however, provides (17 & 18 Vict., c. 125, section 87 = Act V of 1866, section 14) that, in any action upon a negotiable instrument, the loss of it shall not be set up as a defence if an indemnity is given, to the satisfaction of the Court, against the claims of any other person. And the owner of such a document was always entitled in equity to demand payment on giving a sufficient indemnity. We have, therefore, considered that we should correctly embody the English law by providing (section 103) that any person liable to pay and paying the amount due on a note, bill or cheque shall be entitled to be indemnified, and by leaving (section 8) the liability of all parties the same as if the instrument had been forthcoming

10 The draft Bill extended to instruments payable to order the principle upon which protection is afforded by English law to the party primarily liable upon an instrument payable to bearer. The acceptor, maker or indorser of a negotiable instrument payable to bearer, but not of an instrument payable to order, is, by English law, discharged by payment to any person in possession of the instrument, if the payer has no reason to believe the possessor is not the true holder. We have in section 104, clause (c), restricted the protection to such instruments

11 The Bill as now altered consists of fourteen chapters. In the first chapter we have inserted the usual preliminary matter. We have (section 1) excluded hundis from the operation of the Bill. We have provided (section 2) for the repeal of some enactments which are replaced by the provisions of the Bill

12 Section 3 contains a definition of the term "banker" drawn from 39 & 40 Vict., c. 80, s. 8, and of "Notary Public". Notaries are seldom found in the Mufassal, and the Bill provides that their functions may be exercised by persons appointed for that purpose by the Governor General in Council.

13 Chapter II deals with notes, bills and cheques, bills in sets and crossed cheques. We have here substituted definitions which appear to be more comprehensive and accurate than those in the draft Bill. For instance, according to the original definitions, a bill of exchange differs from a cheque only in requiring that the money ordered by the instrument to be paid should be held at the disposal of the drawer—a distinction which appears to us inaccurate, as a bill of exchange is in law, equally with a cheque, assumed to be drawn against funds in the hands of the drawee. Again, the definition of a cheque would include such an instrument as a tradesman's bill on which the debtor writes an order to pay for presentation to a cash-keeper—the ordinary mode of paying bills in mercantile houses, at least in Calcutta, and one adopted by many private persons. According to the draft Bill such an instrument would apparently be negotiable—a very serious result indeed. Again, the definition of a cheque does not require that it should be drawn upon a banker or a person acting as such, nor that it should be payable on demand. These are only a few of what seemed to us the more obvious omissions. We have, therefore, framed definitions which we think will include all the essentials of these instruments.

14 Section 8 defines the holder of a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque as a person entitled in his own name to the possession of it and to receive or recover the amount due thereon from the parties thereto. The holder of an instrument at the time of its loss or destruction also comes within the definition. The corresponding provision of the draft Bill seemed to us vague and unsatisfactory in its definition of "holder," and it was not consistently applied in the substantive provisions of the Bill.

15 In section 15 we have modified the definition of indorsement in the draft Bill by providing that it must be made for the purpose of negotiation. We have also included in the definition a like signature upon a stamped paper intended to be completed as a negotiable instrument.

16 We have added a section (17) providing, in accordance with English law, that, when an instrument may be construed either as a promissory note or bill of exchange, it shall be taken to be that which the holder elects.

17 In section 19 we have supplied an omission in the draft Bill by providing that an instrument in which no time for payment is specified and all cheques are payable on demand.

18 Section 20 provides for the filling up by the holder of blanks in a stamped paper intended to be completed as a negotiable instrument, but not completed when issued. The holder may complete the instrument for any amount covered by the stamp. To this section is added as an illustration section 9 of the draft Bill.

19 To the four presumptions as to negotiable instruments contained in the draft Bill and stated in section 27 of the present Bill, we have added presumptions that an accepted bill was accepted within a reasonable time after date and before maturity, that every bill or note accepted on the back was paid by the acceptor or maker, that is, by the party primarily liable to pay, and that a lost instrument was duly stamped.

20 In addition to the provisions of the draft Bill as to bills in sets, we have (section 29) provided for the right of that holder of one of the parts who first acquires title to his part to possession of the other parts. We have also defined an acceptor in section 7 so as to include an acceptor of a set of bills.

22 Chapter III deals with the parties to negotiable instruments.

23 Section 38, after providing that all persons capable of contracting may be parties to notes, bills and cheques, adds that a minor may draw, indorse, deliver and negotiate such instruments so as to bind all parties except himself.

24 Section 39 provides for persons binding themselves through their authorized agents, and adds that a general authority is not sufficient for this purpose, and that an authority to draw a bill does not of itself authorize an indorsement.

25 Sections 41 and 42 provide for the liability of partners on notes, bills and cheques, and section 43 applies the provisions of the Indian Contract Act, sections 42, 43 and 45 and chapter XI, to the rights and liabilities of partners created thereby, as well as to joint rights and liabilities.

26 Section 45 defines the liability of the drawee of a bill or cheque.

27 Section 46 extends to the case of the maker of a note, a definition contained in section 60 of the draft Bill of the liability of the acceptor of a bill of exchange.

28 Section 47 adds to the category of persons who (according to section 61 of the draft Bill) can accept a bill, all or some of several joint drawees.

29 Section 49 provides that every prior party to a negotiable instrument is liable thereon to a holder in due course, that is, to a bona fide holder for value.

30 Section 50 lays down that the maker of a note or cheque, the drawer of a bill until acceptance, and the acceptor are ordinarily the principal parties to the bill and the other parties their sureties, and section 51 adds that each prior party is a principal as regards the holder, and that the intermediate parties between such prior party and the holder are sureties for him. By section 52 the provisions of the Indian Contract Act, sections 132 to 147 (both inclusive) are rendered applicable to these relations of suretyship.

32 Section 55 adopts, with modifications, the provisions of section 117 of the Evidence Act, 1872, and of sections 36 and 62 of the draft Bill, which estop the acceptor from denying

the drawer's signature The estoppel is, we think, properly confined by this section to suits by holders other than the drawer

33 Section 56 estops the maker of a note and the acceptor of a bill payable to order from denying the payee's capacity to indorse

34 Section 57 adds to the estoppel against denying false signatures, contained in section 35 of the draft Bill, an estoppel against denying the capacity to contract of any prior party to a negotiable instrument in suit

35 Section 58 also carries on the same subject by declaring the acceptor of a bill with a forged indorsement not to be thereby relieved from liability if he knew it to be forged at the time of acceptance, and section 59 declares that the acceptor of a bill drawn in a fictitious name is not thereby relieved from liability to pay upon an indorsement by the same hand as the drawer's signature, and purporting to be made by the drawer.

37 The Bill then goes on to deal with the consideration for negotiable instruments and to protect the holder for value of instruments with respect to which there may have been originally no consideration, or a subsequent failure of consideration, wholly or in part

38 These sections (60 to 63, both inclusive) are substantially taken from the draft Bill We have added an illustration to section 62

40 To section 64, which is substantially the same as section 18 of the draft Bill, we have added an explanation to the effect that an instrument delivered upon a condition which has not happened is not negotiable except by a holder for value and without notice of such condition

41 Where the holder of a note or bill payable to or to the order of a specified person delivers it to another person without indorsing it, but with intent to transfer his title thereto, we think that (with reference to the Code of Civil Procedure, sections 36 and 37) the transferee should not be required to sue in the name of his transferor We have framed section 66 accordingly

42 In section 67 we have, in substantial accordance with section 40 of the draft Bill, dealt with the case of a bona fide holder for value of a bill transferred without indorsement In such a case we have declared the holder entitled to a return of the consideration if the bill is, after the transfer, avoided on account of any matter prior to the transfer, provided such return is claimed within a reasonable time

43 Section 71 describes the parties who may indorse and negotiate negotiable instruments The draft Bill does not appear to provide with sufficient clearness for this matter

44 Section 76 embodies section 23 of the draft Bill but completes that section by enacting that an indorsement of a negotiable instrument for part of the amount due thereon transfers a right to retain the instrument and to receive and recover such part in the name of the indorser

45 Section 77 provides that no agreement which is not expressed on the instrument or which is collateral thereto shall be binding upon holders for value or those deriving title from such holders This section embodies and supplements the corresponding provisions of the draft Bill of which section 42 provided that the title of an indorsee should not be affected by transactions independent of the instrument, and section 99 that a holder in due course should not be affected by any agreement between two signers as to the order of their liability unless such agreement appeared on the face of the instrument The section as now drawn extends the draft sections to holders for value and to holders deriving title from holders for value, and also extends section 99 to all agreements not expressed on the instrument

47 Section 82 states the essentials of presentment for acceptance in the case of bills payable at or after sight, to which the draft Bill, section 56, clause (1), refers as bills payable after demand We have added a provision that presentment must be made by a person entitled to demand acceptance, and we have provided for the case in which the drawee cannot after reasonable search be found, and also for the case of a bill directed to the drawee at a particular place

48 Section 83 provides for presentment for sight of a promissory note payable at a certain period after sight—a matter unnoticed by the draft Bill

49 Section 84 alters section 56, clause (3), of the draft Bill by restricting the time allowed to the drawee for deliberation to the departure of the next post, if that should happen within the twenty-four hours otherwise allowed This is the English rule upon the subject

50 Sections 85 and 86 lay down the general rule for presentment for payment, which is not distinctly laid down in the draft Bill

51 Section 87, as to presentment for payment of inland instruments payable after date or sight, embodies section 133 of the draft Bill, but we have excluded cheques from this section, as we have provided (section 19), in accordance with English law, that such instruments are only payable on demand.

52 Section 88 provides for presentment for payment of an inland note payable by instalments—a matter omitted from the draft Bill

in order to charge the maker or drawer, be presented for payment at that place. The draft Bill allows presentment to be made in such cases at the place of business or residence of the maker or acceptor.

54 Section 91 embodies the general rule as to the place of presentment.

55 Section 92 extends the rule in section 141 of the draft Bill as to personal presentment to the case of presentment for acceptance.

56 Section 93 taken together with section 105 embodies section 101 of the draft Bill, with the modification that the presentment of a cheque must be made before the relation between the drawer and his banker has been altered to the prejudice of the drawer, or the drawer will be discharged from liability. The draft Bill discharges the drawer only to the extent of his actual loss, but, according to the English cases, he is discharged altogether by such delay, the payee of the cheque being considered as having, by such delay, treated the cheque as payment, and as thereby electing to look to the drawee alone (see Hopkins v Ware, L R 4 Ex 268).

57 Section 96 is new. It provides that presentment for acceptance or payment may be made by or to a duly authorized agent, or the representative of a deceased party or the assignee of an insolvent party.

58 Section 98 states the cases in which presentment for payment is excused. It embodies sections 89 and 91 of the draft Bill, and adds the case in which the drawer could not suffer damage by want of presentment, in which case presentment is by English law not necessary as against him.

59 Chapter VI treats of payment and interest. Section 100 declares that payment should be made to the holder, for payment to any other party does not of itself discharge the maker or acceptor. The next two sections, 101 and 102, provide for interest upon notes, bills and cheques, and section 103 for indemnity to the payer of an instrument lost or which cannot be produced.

60 Chapter VII deals with discharge from liability on notes, bills and cheques.

61 Section 104 provides for the discharge of a maker, acceptor or indorser, not only when the holder cancels the acceptor's or indorser's name, and when the maker, acceptor or indorser pays the amount due (sections 38, 85, 87, and 88 of the draft Bill), but also where the holder releases or otherwise discharges the maker, acceptor or indorser.

62 Section 107 adopts the provisions of 16 & 17 Vict, c 59, section 19 by which the drawer of a cheque payable to order and purporting to be indorsed by or on behalf of the payee is discharged by payment in due course.

63 To section 110, which embodies sections 109 and 110 of the draft Bill, we have added an explanation showing what are material alterations in a negotiable instrument.

64 Section 111 is new, and provides that in special cases, such as that of a blank stamped instrument, an uncrossed cheque and an instrument endorsed in blank, a material alteration made by an indorsee discharges his indorser from liability to him in respect of the consideration as well as of the instrument.

65 Section 113 embodies section 115 of the draft Bill and section 11 of 39 & 40 Vict, c 81, relating to crossed cheques.

66 Chapter VIII treats of notice of dishonour.

67 Section 116 substantially agrees with sections 125, 127 and 131 of the draft Bill, but we have altered the description of the parties to whom notice of dishonour by non-acceptance or non-payment must be given. The description now adopted is that those parties must include all whom the holder seeks to make severally liable on the instrument, and some one of any parties jointly liable, but notice to the maker, drawee or acceptor is unnecessary.

68 Section 117 collects into one section a number of provisions as to the form of notice and the mode of giving it. These provisions are scattered over sections 126, 127, 128 and 130 of the draft Bill. We have already pointed out that this section differs from the draft Bill in requiring notice to the party addressed that he will be held liable.

69 Section 119 adds to section 132 of the draft Bill the provision that a party receiving notice of dishonour through his agent for presentment is entitled to the same period after such receipt for the purpose of giving notice as the holder has for giving notice.

70 Section 121 describes the cases in which no notice of dishonour is necessary. These cases include, besides those of dispensation by the party entitled to notice and of inability to give the notice (which are provided for in sections 66, 67, 68, 92 and 93 of the draft Bill), the case of the drawer countermanning payment, the case where the party charged could not suffer from want of such notice, the case of an acceptor who is also a drawer, the case of a promissory note which is not negotiable, and the case in which the party knowing the facts unconditionally promises to pay the amount due on the instrument.

71 Chapter IX contains the rules for noting and protest.

72 Section 122 substantially corresponds with section 119 of the draft Bill, but it allows the noting to be made either upon the instrument, or upon a paper attached thereto, or partly upon each. And the rules as to noting and protest are confined to bills and notes, whereas the draft Bill extended them to cheques—an extension for which there is apparently no authority.

74 In section 126 we have reproduced the provisions of Act VI of 1840, section 4, and of 2 & 3 Wm 4, c 98, as to protest for non-payment after dishonour by non-acceptance.

75 Chapter X contains rules for calculating the reasonable time for presentment for acceptance or payment, for giving notice of dishonour and for noting. We have added in section 129 a provision that, in the case of notice of dishonour, when the parties carry on business or live in the same place, such notice is given within a reasonable time if it is despatched in time to reach its destination on the day next after the day of dishonour.

76 Chapter XI deals with acceptance and payment for honour. We provide (section 131) for the case of protest for better security. In accordance with a recent case (In re Overend, Gurney and Company, L R 6 Eq 344), we have declared (section 136) that the payer for honour shall have all the rights, in respect of the bill, of the holder at the time of such payment.

77 Chapter XII, which treats of compensation, retains (section 137) the provisions of the draft Bill (section 65) substantially unaltered.

78 Chapter XIII treats of foreign bills and restricts to foreign bills the section (73) of the draft Bill, which deals with the dishonour of a bill naming a drawee in case of need.

79 The provisions of chapter XIV as to international law are substantially those of the draft Bill.

80 In conclusion, we desire to express our obligations to the following honourable and learned Judges, namely, Messrs Turner, Kennedy, West and Nánábhāi Haridās to the Madras Chamber of Commerce to Mr Stewart Gladstone, Mr R Stewart, Mr Dickson (late Secretary and Treasurer to the Bank of Bengal), and Mr Scrymgeour, the Calcutta Agent of the Oriental Bank Corporation. We recommend that the Bill as now altered be republished in the Gazette of India and the local Gazettes, that the opinions of the Local Governments, the High Courts and the mercantile community be invited thereon, and that its further consideration be stayed till the Council re-assembles in Calcutta.

Illustrations

A signs instruments in the following terms —

- (a) "I promise to pay B or order Rs 500"
 (b) "I promise to account with B or order for Rs 500 value received by me"
 (c) "I acknowledge myself to be indebted to B in Rs 1,000, to be paid on demand, for value received"
 (d) "Mr B I O U Rs 1,000"

The instruments respectively marked (a) (b) and (c) are promissory notes. The instrument marked (d) is not a promissory note

5 A bill of exchange is an instrument in writing (not being a cheque) containing an unconditional order, signed by the maker, directing a certain person to pay a certain sum of money only to, or to the order of, a person ascertainable when such order is given or to the bearer of the instrument

6 A cheque is an instrument in writing, containing an unconditional order, signed by the maker, directing a specified banker to pay a certain sum of money only to, or to the order of, a person ascertainable when such order is given, or to the bearer thereof.

7. The maker of a bill of exchange or cheque is called the "drawer," the person thereby directed to pay is called the "drawee"

After the drawee of a bill has signed his assent upon the bill, or if there are more parts thereof than one, upon one of such parts, and delivered the same, or

given notice of such signing, to the holder or to some person on his behalf, he is called the "acceptor"

When acceptance is refused and the bill is protested for non acceptance, "Acceptor for honour" and any person accepts it supra protest for honour of the drawer or of any one of the indorsers, such person is called an "acceptor for honour"

The person named in the instrument, to whom or to whose order the money is "Payee" by the instrument directed to be paid, is called the "payee"

8. The "holder" of a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque means any "Holder" person entitled in his own name to the possession thereof and to receive or recover the amount due thereon from the parties thereto

9. "Holder in due course" means any person who became the possessor of a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque if payable to bearer, or the payee or indorsee thereof, if payable to, or to the order of, a payee, for valuable consideration before the amount mentioned in it became payable, and without having reason to believe that any defect existed in the title of the person from whom he derived his title

10 "Payment in due course" means payment in accordance with the apparent tenor of the instrument in good faith and without negligence to any person in possession thereof under circumstances which do not afford a reasonable ground for believing that such person is not entitled to receive payment of the amount therein mentioned

11. A promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque drawn or made in British India, and made payable in, or drawn upon any person resident in, British India shall be deemed to be an inland instrument

12. Any such instrument not so drawn, made or made payable shall be deemed to be a foreign instrument

13. A "negotiable instrument" means a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque expressed to be payable to, or to the order of, a specified person, or to "or order," or to the bearer thereof

14. When a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque is transferred to any person, so as to constitute that person the holder thereof, the instrument is said to be negotiated

15. When the maker or holder of a negotiable instrument signs the same, otherwise than as such maker, for the purpose of negotiation, on the back or face thereof or on a slip of paper annexed thereto, or so signs for the same purpose a stamped paper intended to be completed as a negotiable instrument, he is said to indorse the same, and is called the "indorser"

16. If the indorser signs his name only, the indorsement is said to be "in blank," and if he adds a direction to pay the whole or any part of the amount mentioned in the instrument to, or to the order of, a specified person, the indorsement is said to be "in full," and the person so specified is called the "indorsee" of the instrument

18 If the amount promised or ordered to be paid is stated differently in figures and in words, the amount stated in words shall be the amount promised or ordered to be paid

19 A promissory note or bill of exchange, in which no time for payment is specified, and a cheque are payable on demand

20 Where a stamped paper, which is intended to be completed as a negotiable instrument, is signed and delivered by a competent person as maker, drawer, acceptor or indorser, the holder thereof may complete the same by filling up any blanks therein, and the person so signing shall be liable upon such instrument, in the capacity in which he signed the same, for any amount which may be specified therein not exceeding the amount covered by the stamp thereon

Illustration

A stamped paper intended to be completed as a negotiable instrument is made payable to "or order" the holder of such instrument may fill up the blank with his own name, or that of any other person

21 Where a promissory note is signed by two persons, and it appears on the face of it that one of them subscribes only to an alternative liability, such one is not liable on the note as maker, but is liable as guaranteeing its payment by the maker

23 In a promissory note or bill of exchange the expression "at sight" means on demand. The expression "after sight" means, in a promissory note, after presentment for sight, and in a bill of exchange, after acceptance or protest for non-acceptance

24. In calculating the date at which a promissory note or bill of exchange, made payable a stated number of months after date or after sight, or after a certain event, is at maturity, the period stated shall be held to terminate on the day of the month which corresponds with the day on which the instrument is dated or presented for acceptance or sight or the event happens. If the month in which the period would terminate has no corresponding day, the period shall be held to terminate on the last day of such month.

Illustrations

(a) A negotiable instrument dated 1st February is made payable at one month after date. The instrument is at maturity on the 1st of March.

(b) A negotiable instrument dated 29th January 1877 is made payable at one month after date. The instrument is at maturity on the 28th February 1877.

(c) A negotiable instrument dated 30th August 1877 is made payable three months after date. The instrument is at maturity on the 30th November 1877.

(d) A promissory note or bill of exchange, dated 31st August 1877, is made payable three months after date. The instrument is at maturity on the 30th November 1877.

25. In calculating the date at which a promissory note or bill of exchange, made payable a certain number of days after date or after sight or after a certain event, is at maturity, the day of the date, or of presentment for acceptance or sight, or on which the event happens, shall be excluded.

Date on which bill or note payable so many days after date or sight or after a certain event, is at maturity. certain number of days after date or after sight or after a certain event, is at maturity, the day of the date, or of presentment for acceptance or sight, or on which the event happens, shall be excluded.

26. When the day on which a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque is at maturity is not a business day, the instrument shall be deemed to be due on the next preceding business day, but if the day of maturity is a public holiday, then on the next succeeding business day.

27. Until the contrary is proved, the following presumptions shall be made—

(a) that every negotiable instrument was made, of valuable consideration, drawn, accepted, indorsed, negotiated and transferred for valuable consideration.

(c) that every transfer of a negotiable instrument was made before its maturity.

(d) that every promissory note or bill of exchange accepted on the back was paid by the maker or acceptor thereof respectively.

(e) that the holder of a negotiable instrument is a holder in due course.

(f) that the indorsements appearing upon a negotiable instrument were made in the order in which they appear thereon.

(g) that a lost bill of exchange, promissory note or cheque was duly stamped.

Bills in Sets

28. Bill of exchange may be drawn in parts, each part being numbered and containing a condition that it shall continue payable only so long as the others remain unpaid. All the parts together make a set, but the whole set constitutes only one bill, and is extinguished when one of the parts, if a separate bill, would be extinguished.

Exception—When a person accepts or indorses different parts of the bill in favour of different persons, he is liable on each part as if it were a separate bill.

29. That holder of one of the parts, who first acquired title to his part, is entitled to the other parts of the same set.

Crossed Cheques

30. Where a cheque bears across its face an addition of the words "and company" or any abbreviation thereof, between two parallel transverse lines, or of two parallel transverse lines simply, either with or without the words "not negotiable," that addition shall be deemed a crossing, and the cheque shall be deemed to be crossed generally.

31. Where a cheque bears across its face an addition of the name of a banker, either with or without the words "not negotiable," that addition shall be deemed a crossing, and the cheque shall be deemed to be crossed specially, and to be crossed to that banker.

Where a cheque is crossed generally or specially, the holder may add the words "not negotiable."

Where a cheque is crossed specially, the banker to whom it is crossed may again cross it specially to another banker, his agent for collection.

33. Where a cheque is crossed generally, the banker on whom it is drawn shall not pay it otherwise than to a banker.

Where a cheque is crossed specially, the banker on whom it is drawn shall not pay it otherwise than to the banker to whom it is crossed, or his agent for collection.

34. Where a cheque is crossed specially to more than one banker, except when crossed to an agent for the purpose of collection, the banker on whom it is drawn shall refuse payment thereof.

35. Where the banker on whom a crossed cheque is drawn has paid the same in due course, the banker paying the cheque, and (in case such cheque has come to the hands of the payee) the drawer thereof, shall respectively be entitled to the same rights, and be placed in the same position in all

PARTS TO NOTES, BILLS AND CHEQUES

38 Every person capable of contracting, according to the law to which he is subject, may bind himself and be bound by the making, drawing, acceptance, indorsement, delivery and negotiation of a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque

A minor may draw, indorse, deliver and negotiate such instruments so as to bind all parties except himself

39 Every person capable of binding himself or of being bound, as in the last preceding section mentioned, may so bind himself or be bound by a duly authorized agent acting in his name

An authority to draw bills of exchange does not of itself import an authority to indorse

40. An agent who signs his name to a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque, without indicating thereon that he signs as agent, or that he does not intend thereby to incur personal responsibility, is liable personally on the instrument, except to those who know that he signed as agent, or that he had no such intention

41 Where there are several drawees of a bill of exchange who are not partners, each of them can accept it for himself, but none or them can accept it for another without his authority

of exchange or cheques, any partner may bind his firm by making, drawing, accepting, indorsing or negotiating such instruments in the name of his firm, but not otherwise

Exception—A partner may bind his firm by accepting in his own name, for partnership purposes, a bill drawn upon the firm

43 In the absence of a contract to the contrary, the provisions of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, sections 42, 43 and 45, and those of chapter XI of the same Act shall respectively apply to all joint rights and liabilities created by promissory notes, bills of exchange and cheques, and to the rights and liabilities thereon of partners

44 The drawer of a bill of exchange or cheque is bound, in case of dishonour by the drawee or acceptor thereof, to compensate the holder for any loss or damage caused thereby, provided due notice of dishonour has been given to, or received by, the drawer as hereinafter provided

45. The drawee of a bill of exchange or cheque, having sufficient funds of the drawer in his hands properly applicable to the payment of such bill or cheque, must accept the bill or pay the cheque when duly required so to do, and, in default of such acceptance or payment, must compensate the drawer for any loss or damage caused by such default

(a) the maker of a promissory note and the acceptor before maturity of a bill of exchange, are bound to pay the amount thereof according to the apparent tenor of the note or acceptance respectively, and

(b) the acceptor of a bill of exchange at or after maturity is bound to pay the amount thereof to the holder on demand

47 No person except the drawee of a bill of exchange, or all or some of several joint drawees, or a person named therein as a drawee in case of need, or an acceptor for honour, can bind himself by an acceptance

damage caused to him by such dishonour, provided due notice of dishonour has been given to, or received by, such indorser as hereinafter provided.

Every indorser after dishonour is liable as upon an instrument payable on demand.

Liability of prior parties to holder in due course

50 The maker of a promissory note or cheque, the drawer of a bill of exchange until acceptance, and the acceptor are, as between themselves and any other parties thereto, in the absence of any contract to the contrary between themselves and such parties, liable thereon as principal debtors, and the other parties thereto are liable thereon as sureties for them.

Maker, drawer and acceptor principals

51 Every prior party to a negotiable instrument is, as between himself and the holder thereof, in the absence of any contract to the contrary between himself and the holder, liable thereon as a principal debtor, and the parties thereto, subsequent to him and prior to such holder, are liable to the holder as sureties for such prior party.

Illustration

A draws a bill on B, who accepts. A afterwards indorses the bill to C, C to D and D to E. As between E and B, B is the principal debtor and A, C and D are his sureties. As between E and A, A is the principal debtor and C and D are his sureties. As between E and C, C is the principal debtor and D is his surety.

52 The provisions of sections 132 to 147, both inclusive, of the Indian Contract Act 1872, shall apply to the relations of suretyship between parties to negotiable instruments.

Suretyship

53 The indorser of a negotiable instrument is not discharged from his liability thereupon by the holder having merely forbore to sue a prior party, but where the holder, without the consent of the indorser, destroys or impairs the indorser's remedy against a prior party, the indorser is discharged from liability to the holder to the same extent as if the instrument had been paid at maturity.

Illustration

A is the holder of a bill of exchange made payable to the order of B which contains the following indorsements in blank —

Second indorsement "Peter Williams"
Third indorsement, "Wright and Co"
Fourth indorsement, "John Rozario"

This bill A puts in suit against John Rozario and strikes out the indorsements by Peter Williams and Wright and Co. A is not entitled to recover anything from John Rozario.

57. No indorser of a negotiable instrument shall, in a suit thereon by a subsequent holder, be permitted to deny the signature or capacity to contract of any prior party to the instrument.

58 An acceptor of a bill of exchange is not relieved from liability, by reason that an indorsement thereon is forged, if he knew or had reason to believe such indorsement to be forged when he accepted the bill.

Acceptor bound although indorsement forged

59 An acceptor of a bill of exchange drawn in a fictitious name is not, by reason that such name is fictitious, relieved from liability to any holder claiming under an indorsement by the same hand as the drawer's signature, and purporting to be made by the drawer.

Acceptance of bill drawn in fictitious name

60. If at any time there has been valuable consideration between any parties to a negotiable instrument for the making, drawing, acceptance, indorsement, negotiation or transfer thereof, the party receiving such consideration is, except as provided in sections 39, 62, 63, 75, 82, 83, 85, 89, 90, 93, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110 and 111, and in the absence of any contract to the contrary, liable upon the instrument to all subsequent parties thereto, and every subsequent holder is a holder for consideration.

Illustrations

(a) A indorses a bill of exchange to B, at the request of C, for C's account with B. B is a holder of the bill for consideration, and if he indorses it as a present to D, D is a holder for consideration.

(b) A, the holder of a negotiable instrument, indorses it in full to B, in the belief that B has done something which he has not done. B, for consideration, indorses the instrument in blank to C, and C indorses it to D. D is a holder of the instrument for consideration.

(c) A, the holder of a negotiable instrument indorses it in full to B, in the belief that B has done something which he has not done. B, for consideration proceeding from C, indorses the instrument in blank to C, and C indorses it to D. D strikes out C's indorsement. D is a holder of the instrument for consideration.

61. When there was no consideration for the making, drawing, acceptance or indorsement of a negotiable instrument, or when the consideration has wholly failed, the maker, drawer, acceptor or indorser is not liable thereon to the party in whose favour the instrument was so made, drawn, accepted or indorsed, or to any party claiming through such party, unless valuable con-

consideration moved from the claimant or from some party through whom he derives title. But the maker, drawer, acceptor or indorser is liable to compensate any subsequent party who, being liable on such instrument, pays the amount due thereon.

Explanation—The drawer of a bill of exchange stands in immediate relation with the acceptor. The maker of a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque, stands in immediate relation with the payee, and the indorser with his indorsee. Other signers may by agreement stand in immediate relation with a holder.

Illustration

A draws a bill on B for Rs. 500 payable to the order of A. B accepts the bill but subsequently dishonours it by non payment. A sues B on the bill. B proves that it was accepted for value as to Rs. 400 and as an accommodation to the plaintiff as to the residue. A can only recover Rs. 400.

63. Where a part of the consideration for which a person signed a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque, though not consisting of money, is readily ascertainable in money, and there has been a failure of that part, the sum which a holder standing in immediate relation with such signer is entitled to receive from him, is proportionally reduced.

OF NEGOTIATION

64. Subject to the provisions of section 79, a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque payable to bearer is negotiable by delivery thereof.

Exception—A promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque delivered on condition that it is not to take effect except in a certain event is not negotiable (except in the hands of a holder for value without notice) unless such event happens.

Illustrations

(a) A the holder of a negotiable instrument payable to bearer delivers it to B's agent to keep for B. The instrument has been negotiated.

(b) A, the holder of a negotiable instrument payable to bearer which is in the hands of A's banker, who is at the time the banker of B, directs the banker to transfer the instrument to B's credit in the banker's account with B. The banker does so, and accordingly now possesses the instrument as B's agent. The instrument has been negotiated, and B has become the holder of it.

66. If the holder of such an instrument as in the last preceding section mentioned, delivers it to another person without

67. If such transfer, as in the last preceding section mentioned, is made for valuable consideration to a person having no reason to believe in the existence of any matter affecting the validity of the instrument or of the transfer thereof, and the instrument is thereafter avoided as against any party on account of matters prior to such transfer, the transferor is bound to return to the transferee the consideration received, provided that such return is claimed within a reasonable time.

68. The holder of a negotiable instrument indorsed in blank may, without signing his own name, by writing above the indorser's signature a direction to pay to any other person as indorsee, convert the indorsement in blank into an indorsement in full, and the holder does not thereby incur the responsibility of an indorser.

Illustrations

B signs the following indorsements on different negotiable instruments—

- (a) "Pay the contents to C only"
- (b) "Pay C for my use"
- (c) "Pay C or order for the account of B"
- (d) "The within must be credited to C"

(e) "Pay C"

(f) "Pay C value in account with the Oriental Bank"

(g) "Pay the contents to C being part of the consideration in a certain deed of assignment executed by C to the indorser and others."

These indorsements do not exclude the right of further negotiation by C.

71. Every sole maker, drawer, payee or indorsee, or all of several joint makers, drawers, payees or indorsees of a negotiable instrument may, if the negotiability of such instrument has not been restricted or excluded, as in the last preceding section mentioned, indorse and negotiate the same.

Illustration

A bill is drawn payable to A or order. A indorses it to B, the indorsement not containing the words 'or order, or any equivalent words. B may negotiate the instrument.

Where an indorser so excludes his liability and afterwards becomes the holder of the instrument, all intermediate indorsers are liable to him.

(a) The indorser of a negotiable instrument signs his name, adding the words—

"Without recourse to me."

Upon this indorsement he incurs no liability.

(b) A, the payee and holder of a bill of exchange, indorses it to B, and B to C. C then indorses it back to A, each of these indorsements being in due course. A is reinstated in his former rights upon the instrument, but has not acquired any rights against B or C.

(c) A is the payee and holder of a negotiable instrument. Excluding personal liability by an indorsement "without recourse," he transfers the instrument to B, and B indorses it to C, who indorses it to A. A is not only reinstated in his former rights, but has the rights of an indorsee against B and C.

73. A holder of a negotiable instrument who derives title from a holder in due course has the rights thereon of that holder in due course.

74. A negotiable instrument indorsed in blank is payable to the bearer thereof even although originally payable to order.

75. If a negotiable instrument after having been indorsed in blank is indorsed in full, the amount of it cannot be claimed from the indorser in full, except by the person to whom it has been indorsed in full, or by one who derives title through such person.

76. Where a negotiable instrument is indorsed for part of the sum due thereon to the indorser, the indorsement transfers only a right to retain the instrument, and to receive or sue for such part in the name of the indorser.

Illustration

A person who is a creditor of A signs, as acceptor, a bill of exchange in A's favour for 3,000 rupees. A being the holder indorses it for value to B who is aware that the acceptor was a creditor of A. A's debt to the acceptor can not be set off against B's claim on the bill.

79. When a negotiable instrument has been lost, or has been obtained by unlawful means or from any maker, acceptor or holder thereof by unlawful means, or for an illegal consideration, no possessor or indorsee, who claims through the person who so obtained the instrument, is entitled to receive the amount due thereon from such maker, acceptor or holder, or from any party prior to such holder, unless such possessor or indorsee is, or some person through whom he claims was, a holder thereof in due course.

Provided that any person who, in good faith and for valuable consideration, becomes the holder, after maturity, of a promissory note or bill of exchange made, drawn or accepted without consideration for the purpose of enabling some party thereto to raise money thereon, may recover the amount of the note or bill from any prior party.

Illustration

The acceptor of a bill of exchange, when he accepted it, deposited with the drawer certain goods as a collateral security for the payment of the bill, with power to the drawer to sell the goods and apply the proceeds in discharge of the bill if it were not paid at maturity. The bill not having been paid at maturity, the drawer sold the goods and retained the proceeds, but indorsed the bill to A. A's title is subject to the same objection as the drawer's title.

OF PRESENTMENT

82. A bill of exchange payable at or after sight must, if no time or place is specified therein for presentment, be presented to the drawee thereof for acceptance, if he can, after reasonable search, be found, by a person entitled to demand acceptance, within a reasonable time after it is drawn, and in business hours on a business day. In default of such presentment, no party thereto is liable thereon to the person making such default.

If the drawee cannot, after reasonable search, be found, the bill is dishonoured.

If the bill is directed to the drawee at a particular place, it must be presented at that place, and if at the due date for presentment he has absconded, the bill is dishonoured.

84. The drawee of a bill of exchange presented to him for acceptance may retain the same until the end of twenty-four hours, or until the next post to the holder, whichever first happens, to consider whether he will accept it

Explanation—In calculating the twenty-four hours mentioned in this section, days which are not business days shall be excluded

85. Promissory notes, bills of exchange and cheques must be presented for payment to the maker, acceptor or drawee thereof respectively, by or on behalf of the holder as hereinafter provided. In default of such presentment, the other parties thereto are not liable thereon to such holder

Exception—No presentment is necessary of a promissory note payable on demand in order to charge the maker thereof

87. An inland promissory note or bill of exchange, made payable at a specified period after date or sight thereof, must be presented for payment within three days after the end of such period

88. An inland promissory note payable by instalments must be presented for payment within three days after the date fixed for payment of each instalment, and non-payment on such presentment has the same effect as non-payment of a note at maturity

89. A promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque made, drawn or accepted payable at a specified place and not elsewhere must, in order to charge any party, thereto, be presented for payment at that place

91. A promissory note or bill of exchange, not made payable as in the last two preceding sections mentioned, must be presented for payment at one of the places specified (if any), or at the place of business (if any), or at the usual residence, of the maker, drawee or acceptor thereof, as the case may be

92. If the maker, drawee or acceptor of a negotiable instrument has no known place of business or residence is specified in the instrument for presentment for acceptance or payment, such presentment may be made to him in person wherever he can be found

93. A cheque must, in order to charge the drawer, be presented at the bank upon which it is drawn within a reasonable time after it was first received from the drawer, or before the relation between the drawer and his banker has been altered to the prejudice of the drawer

94. A cheque must, in order to charge any person except the drawer, be presented within a reasonable time after receipt thereof from such person

95. A negotiable instrument payable on demand must be presented for payment within a reasonable time after it is received by the holder

96. Presentment for acceptance or payment may be made by or to the duly authorized agent of the drawee, maker or acceptor, as the case may be, or where he has died, to his legal representative, or where he has been declared an insolvent, to his assignee

97. When the holder of a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque, and the maker, acceptor or drawee reside in different places, the instrument may be forwarded by post for the purpose of being presented for payment. In such case, when there is a daily post, the instrument must be posted at some time not later than the last post on the day following that on which the holder has received such instrument, and the person receiving such instrument by the post must present it not later than the day following its receipt, where there is not a daily post, the instrument must be forwarded and presented within a reasonable time

98. No presentment for payment is necessary, and the instrument is dishonoured at the due date for presentment, in any of the following cases—

(a) if the maker, drawee or acceptor closes his place of business, or cannot after reasonable search be found, or intentionally prevents the presentment of the instrument, or access to him cannot be obtained during business hours,

(b) as against any party if, after maturity with knowledge that the instrument has not been presented—

he makes a part payment on account of the amount due on the instrument,

or promises to pay the amount due thereon in whole or in part,

or otherwise waives his right to take advantage of any default in presentment for payment,

(c) as against the drawer, if the drawer could not suffer damage from the want of such presentment

deals with or delivers back such bill as to cause loss to the holder, he must compensate the holder for such loss

OF PAYMENT AND INTEREST

100 Subject to the provisions of section 104, clause (c), payment of the amount due on a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque must, in order to discharge the maker or acceptor, be made to the holder of the instrument

101. When interest at a specified rate is expressly made payable on a promissory note or bill of exchange, interest shall be calculated at the rate specified, on the amount and from the date of the instrument, until tender or realization of the amount due thereon

102. When no rate of interest is specified in the instrument, interest on the amount thereof shall, except in cases provided for by the Code of Civil Procedure, section 532, be calculated at the rate of six per centum per annum, from the date at which the same ought to have been paid by the party charged, until tender or realization of the amount due thereon

103. Any person liable to pay, and called upon by the holder thereof to pay, the amount due on a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque is, before payment entitled to have it shown, and is on payment entitled to have it delivered up, to him, or, if the instrument is lost or cannot be produced, to be indemnified against any further claim thereon against him

CHAPTER VII.

OF DISCHARGE FROM LIABILITY ON NOTES, BILLS AND CHEQUES

(a) to a holder thereof cancelling such acceptor's or indorser's name with intent to discharge him, and to all parties claiming under such holder,

(b) to a holder thereof otherwise discharging such maker, acceptor or indorser, and to all parties deriving title under such holder after notice of such discharge,

106. When a cheque has not been duly presented for payment, and the drawer thereof has thereby sustained loss or damage, he is discharged from liability to the holder making default in presentment

108. If the holder of a bill of exchange acquiesces in a conditional acceptance, or one limited to part of the sum mentioned in the bill, or which substitutes a different place or time for payment, or which is not signed by all the drawees (not being partners), all previous parties whose consent is not obtained to such acceptance are discharged as against the holder and those claiming under him

109 Alterations made in a promissory note or bill of exchange by a person not a party to such note or bill have no effect upon the liability of a party who signed the instrument as maker or acceptor before such alterations were made

110. Save as provided in sections 20, 32, 38 and 105, any material alteration of a negotiable instrument renders the same void as against any party thereto at the time, and not consenting to such alteration, unless such alteration was made in order to carry out the common intention of the original parties

Explanation—The following are material alterations within the meaning of this section, namely an alteration of date, amount, or of time or place of payment, the insertion in the body of the instrument of words authorising the transfer thereof, or stating the value thereof to have been received on a particular account, the addition of a name as that of a maker or drawer, obliteration of, addition to, or alteration of, the crossing of a cheque

111. Save as last aforesaid, any such alteration as in the last preceding section mentioned, if made by an indorsee, discharges his indorser from all liability to him in respect of the instrument or the consideration thereof

112. An acceptor or indorser of a negotiable instrument is bound by his acceptance or indorsement notwithstanding any previous alteration of the instrument

113. Where a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque has been materially altered, but does not appear to have been so altered, or where a cheque has been crossed but does not appear to have been crossed, payment thereof by a person or banker liable to pay and paying the same according to the apparent tenor thereof at the time of payment and otherwise in due course, shall discharge such person or banker so paying from all liability thereon, and such payment shall not be questioned by reason of the instrument having been altered or the cheque crossed

CHAPTER VIII OF NOTICE OF DISHONOUR

114 A bill of exchange is said to be dishonoured by non-acceptance when the drawee, or one of several drawees not being partners, makes default in acceptance upon being duly required to accept the bill

115 A promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque is said to be dishonoured by non-payment when the maker of the note, acceptor of the bill, or drawee of the cheque makes default in payment upon being duly required to pay the same

116. When a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque is dishonoured by non-acceptance or non-payment, the holder thereof, or some party thereto who remains liable thereon, must give notice that the instrument has been so dishonoured to all other parties whom the holder seeks to make severally liable thereon, and to some one of several parties whom he seeks to make jointly liable thereon

Nothing in this section renders it necessary to give notice to the maker of the dishonoured promissory note, or the drawee or acceptor of the dishonoured bill of exchange or cheque

117. Notice of dishonour may be given by or to a duly authorised agent of the person by or to whom it is required to be given, or, where he has died, to his legal representative, or, where he has been declared an insolvent, to his assignee, may be oral or written, may, if written, be sent by post, and may be in any form, but it must inform the party to whom it is given, either in express terms or by reasonable intendment, that the instrument has been dishonoured, and in what way, and that he will be held liable thereon, and it must be given within a reasonable time after dishonour, at the place of business, or (in case such party has no place of business) at the residence, of the party for whom it is intended

119 When the instrument is deposited with an agent for presentment, the agent is entitled to the same time to give notice to his principal as if he were the holder giving notice of dishonour, and the principal is entitled to a further like period to give notice of dishonour

121 No notice of dishonour is necessary—
(a) when it is dispensed with by the party entitled thereto,

(b) in order to charge the drawer, when he has countermanded payment,

(c) when the party charged could not suffer damage from want of notice,

(d) when the party entitled to notice cannot after due search be found, or the party bound to give notice is, for any other reason, unable without any fault of his own to give it,

(e) to charge the drawers, when the acceptor is also a drawer,

(f) in the case of a promissory note which is not negotiable,

(g) when the party entitled to notice, knowing the facts, promises unconditionally to pay the amount due on the instrument

OF NOTING AND PROTEST

122 When a promissory note or bill of exchange has been dishonoured by non-acceptance or non-payment, the holder may cause such dishonour to be noted by a notary public upon the instrument or upon a paper attached thereto, or partly upon each

Such note must be made within a reasonable time after dishonour, and must specify the date of dishonour, the reason, if any, assigned for such dishonour, or, if not expressly dishonoured, the reason why the holder treats the instrument as dishonoured, and the notary's charges

123 When a promissory note or bill of exchange has been dishonoured by non-acceptance or non-payment, the holder may, within a reasonable time, cause such fact to be noted and certified by a notary public. Such certificate is called a protest and shall, in the absence of proof to the contrary, in a suit upon the instrument, be deemed evidence of the fact of dishonour

When the acceptor of a bill of exchange has become insolvent, or his credit has been publicly impeached, before the maturity of the bill, the holder may, within a reasonable time, cause a notary public to demand better security of the acceptor, and on its being refused may, within a reasonable time, cause such facts to be noted and certified as aforesaid. Such certificate is called a protest for better security

(a) either the instrument itself, or a literal transcript of the instrument and of everything written or printed thereupon,

(b) the name of the person for whom and against whom the instrument has been protested,

(c) a statement that payment or acceptance, or better security, as the case may be, has been demanded of such person by the notary public, the terms of his answer, if any, or a statement that he gave no answer, or that he could not be found,

(d) when the note or bill has been dishonoured, the place and time of dishonour, and when better security has been refused, the place and time of refusal,

(e) the subscription of the notary public making the protest,

(f) in the event of an acceptance for honour or of a payment for honour, the name of the person by whom, of the person for whom, and the manner in which, such acceptance or payment was offered and effected

126 All bills of exchange drawn payable at some other place than the place mentioned as the residence of the drawee, and which are dishonoured by non-acceptance, may, without further presentment to the drawee, be protested for non-payment, in the place specified for payment, unless paid before maturity

OF REASONABLE TIME

127. In determining what is a reasonable time for presentment for acceptance or payment, for giving notice of dishonour and for noting, regard shall be had to the nature of the instrument and the usual course of dealing with respect to similar instruments, and in calculating such time, days which are not business days shall be excluded

128 Presentment is made within a reasonable time, with the meaning of sections 82, 93, 94 and 95, if it is made on the business day next after that on which the holder received the bill, negotiable instrument or cheque referred to, or when there is no more delay than is occasioned by the residence of the parties to the bill, negotiable instrument or cheque in different places

Illustration

A draws on B, resident at Calcutta a bill of exchange in favour of C payable at sight and sends it to C at Benares. C, the day after he receives it indorses it to D, and dispatches it to D at Calcutta. D, the day after he receives the bill, presents it for payment. The delay which has taken place in presenting the bill is not unreasonable

129. If the holder and the party to whom notice of dishonour is given carry on business or live (as the case may be) in different places, such notice is given within a reasonable time if it is despatched by the next post or on the day next after the day of dishonour

If the said parties carry on business or live in the same place, such notice is given within a reasonable time if it is despatched in time to reach its destination on the day next after the day of dishonour

CHAPTER XI

OF ACCEPTANCE AND PAYMENT FOR HONOUR

131. When a bill of exchange has been noted or protested for non-acceptance or for better security, any person may, with the consent of the holder, by writing on the bill, accept the same for the honour of any party thereto

132 Where the acceptance does not express for whose honour it is made, it shall be deemed to be made for the honour of the drawer

133 An acceptor for honour binds himself to all parties subsequent to the party for whose honour he accepts to pay the amount of the bill if the drawee do not, and such party, and all prior parties, are liable in their respective capacities to compensate the acceptor for honour for all loss or damage sustained by him in consequence of such acceptance

But an acceptor for honour is not liable to the holder of the bill unless it is presented, or (in case the address given by such acceptor on the bill is a place other than the place where the bill is made payable) forwarded for presentment, not later than the day next after the day of its maturity

134 An acceptor for honour cannot be charged unless the bill has at its maturity been presented to the drawee for payment and has been dishonoured by him, and noted or protested for such dishonour

135 When a bill of exchange has been noted or protested for non-payment, any person may pay the same for the honour of any party liable to pay the same, provided that the person so paying has previously declared before a notary public the party for whose honour he pays, and that such declaration has been recorded by such notary public

136 Any person so paying, as in the last preceding section provided, is entitled to all the rights, in respect of the bill, of the holder at the time of such payment, and may recover from the party for whose honour he pays all sums so paid, with interest thereon and with all expenses properly incurred in making such payment

OF COMPENSATION

137. The compensation payable in case of dishonour of a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque, by any party liable to the holder or any indorsee, shall (except in cases provided for by the Code of Civil Procedure, section 532) be determined by the following rules —

(a) The holder is entitled to the amount due upon the instrument, together with the expenses properly incurred in presenting, noting and protesting it,

- (b) When the person charged resides at a place different from that at which the instrument was payable, the holder is entitled to receive such sum at the current rate of exchange between the two places,
- (c) An indorser who, being liable, has paid the amount due on the same is entitled to the amount so paid with interest at six per centum per annum from the date of payment until tender or realization thereof, together with all expenses caused by the dishonour and payment,
- (d) When the person charged and the indorser reside at different places, the indorser is entitled to receive such sum at the current rate of exchange between the two places,
- (e) The party entitled to compensation may draw a bill upon the party liable to compensate him, payable at sight or on demand, for the amount due to him together with all expenses properly incurred by him. Such bill must be accompanied by the instrument dishonoured and the protest thereof (if any). If such bill is dishonoured, the party dishonouring the same is liable to make compensation thereof in the same manner as in the case of the original bill.

OF FOREIGN BILLS

138. Where a drawee in case of need is named in a foreign bill of exchange, the bill is not dishonoured until dishonoured by such drawee.
139. Foreign bills of exchange must be protested for dishonour when such protest is required by the law of the place where they are drawn.

OF INTERNATIONAL LAW

140. In the absence of a contract to the contrary, the liability of the maker of a foreign promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque is regulated in all essential matters by the law of the place where he made the instrument; the liability of the acceptor, by the law of the place where he accepted the instrument; the liability of the indorser, by the law of the place where he indorsed the instrument.

Illustration

A bill of exchange was drawn by A in California, where the rate of interest is 25 per cent, and accepted by B, payable in Washington, where the rate of interest is 6 per cent. The bill is endorsed in British India, and is dishonoured. An action on the bill is brought against B in British India. He is liable to pay interest at the rate of 6 per cent only, but if A is charged as drawer, A is liable to pay interest at the rate of 25 per cent.

141. Where a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque is made payable in a different place from that in which it is made or indorsed, the law of the place where it is made payable determines what constitutes dishonour and what notice of dishonour is sufficient.

Illustration

A bill of exchange drawn and indorsed in British India, but accepted payable in France, is dishonoured. The indorsee causes it to be protested for such dishonour, and gives notice thereof in accordance with the law of France though not in accordance with the rules herein contained in respect of bills which are not foreign. The notice is sufficient.

142. If a negotiable instrument is made, drawn, accepted, or indorsed, &c., out of British India but in accordance with its law of British India, the circumstance that any agreement evidenced by such instrument is invalid according to the law of the country wherein it was entered into does not invalidate any subsequent acceptance or endorsement made thereon in British India.

143. Until the contrary is proved the law of any foreign country regarding promissory notes, bills of exchange and cheques shall be presumed to be the same as that of British India.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 17th October 1877, and was referred to a Select Committee —

No 18 of 1877

A Bill to amend the North-Western Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1873

For the purpose of amending the North-Western Provinces Land-Revenue Act, 1873, it is hereby enacted as follows —

Addition to Act XIX of 1873, s 29      1 To section 29 of the same Act the following clause shall be added —

“EXPLANATION — Charges incurred in the preparation of village-maps shall be deemed to be charges within the meaning of this section”

2 In section 194 of the said Act, for the words “otherwise rendered” the words “declared by the Local Government” shall be substituted

3 To section 199 of the same Act the following Amendment of Act ing clause shall be added XIX of 1873, s 199 (namely) —

“Persons whose property is under the superintendence of the Court of Wards shall not be competent to create, without the sanction of the Court, any charge upon, or interest in, such property or any part thereof”

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

The primary object of this Bill, which has been recommended by the Local Government, is to deprive persons whose estates are under the management of the Court of Wards of power to charge or alienate those estates. The opportunity has been taken to make a slight improvement in the wording of section 194 of the North-Western Provinces Land-Revenue Act, 1873, and to remove a doubt as to the power of applying the patwāī-fund raised under section 29 to defray the cost of preparing those village-maps, on which the correctness of the Patwāī's records mainly depends

[First publication]

The following Report of the Select Committee, together with the Bill as settled by them, was presented to the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 17th October 1877 —

We, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee to which the Bill to amend the law relating to the management and preservation of Government forests, to the transit of forest produce and to the duty leviable on timber was referred, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill and the papers specified in the margin

2. As Act VII of 1865 has never been extended to Madras or Bombay, and much confusion and uncertainty might be created by its continuing in force in so far as not superseded by the present Bill, we have provided (section 1) for its repeal, as also that of Acts VII of 1869 and XIII of 1873, in any territories to which the present Bill may be extended.

 From the Department of Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce, No 1264 F, dated 6th October 1877, and enclosure
 Note by the Hon'ble T C Hope, dated 9th October 1877

We have also provided that such extension shall be of the whole Bill, and not of parts only since it will always remain optional with Local Governments to exercise or not the powers which any chapter or section confers

3 We have improved the definitions of "Forest-officer" and "Forest-produce," and have assimilated that of "cattle" to the definition in the Cattle Trespass Act

4 In order to avoid the delay and expense of an elaborate preliminary demarcation, which was objected to in many quarters, we have provided (section 4) that the notification of the proposal to constitute a Reserved Forest may be in general terms, but have indicated more clearly (section 19) that the final demarcation must be precise

5 We have made more clear (section 4) the intention that the Forest Settlement Officer should not, except under very exceptional circumstances, be a Forest officer. But, in deference to representations from British Burma and the North-West Provinces, we have provided an option of entrusting the forest settlement to two or three officers instead of one

6 In order to meet the case of the wild tribes and illiterate persons who will in many instances be the possessors of rights over forest lands, we have allowed (section 6) claims to be preferred orally to the Forest Settlement Officer and made it obligatory on him to take such statements down in writing

7 With the same view we have required (section 7) the Forest Settlement Officer to inquire into the existence of rights, by searching the Government records and taking evidence, even though the people themselves, through ignorance or neglect, may not appear to claim them

8 We have also provided (section 9) for the hearing of claims not preferred within the time prescribed by section 6, whenever claimants can shew sufficient cause for their delay

9 In section 10 we have made more clear the alternative courses which may be pursued in the case of claims to or over land, and have also provided for compensation being given wholly or partly in land where the parties prefer land to money.

10 From section 12 the provisions contained in section 10 of the Bill as introduced for the rejection of rights which were not habitually exercised by the claimants at the time of the notification under section 4, or which were not required for the beneficial use of the land or premises or of the person claiming the same, have been omitted

11 Sections 16 and 17 express more clearly than section 15 of the Bill as introduced the intention of the latter as to the authorities by whom and the manner in which appeals are to be heard

12 We have made a new provision (section 21) for the revision by the Local Government, at any time not exceeding five years from the date of the Notification under section 19, of any settlement effected under section 14 which experience has shewn to be unworkable

13 We have provided (section 24) that rights appendant to any land or house may be freely alienated therewith

14 Section 28 has been amended in phraseology, so as to admit of forests, the use of which is essential to village communities, or in which such communities have rights jointly with Government, being assigned to such communities, under suitable precautions against waste or misappropriation

15 In section 32 of the Bill as introduced it was provided that the provisions of chapter IV, regarding district or (as we prefer to term them) Protected forests, should be without prejudice to all existing rights of individuals or communities. In order, however, that holders of rights may not be put to the inconvenience and expense of proving them in order to establish their immunity from the restrictions of the chapter, we have provided (section 29) that no land shall be constituted a Protected Forest unless the nature and extent of the rights of Government and other persons in it have been enquired into and recorded at a survey or settlement or in some other sufficient manner. At the same time it has been left open to any person to dispute the correctness of such record

16 In section 30 we have inserted a provision to permit of the closing of portions of a Protected Forest for a limited period, provided the remainder of the forest be sufficient and convenient for the exercise of rights thus temporarily suspended in the portion closed. This provision is in accordance with the rules in the North-West Provinces made under the existing law, and is generally considered necessary for purposes of renovation

17 In section 32 we have given power to make rules to regulate the exercise of recorded rights, so as to prevent, in the interest of the community, waste and injury to the forest

18 In order to preclude hardship to the owners of private forests from the operation of chapter V, we have enabled such owners (section 37) to require the Government to acquire the land for public purposes

19 We have added a section (38) to enable Government, at the request of owners of land, either to administer such land as a Reserved or Protected Forest, or to apply to it all or any of the provisions of the Bill. This improvement has been made at the suggestion of the Panjáb Government, with special reference to sacred and other private forests in that province, but we have reason to believe that the option of obtaining for their forest property the same legal protection, and also (if desired) the same skilled administration, as the Government provides for its own, is likely to be welcomed by the owners of rent-free estates and other private property in many parts of India.

20. We have restricted (section 39) the power of levying a duty on timber produced in British India to timber in respect of which the Government has any rights. The holders of lands under lakhiraj, inami or other tenures in which forest rights are included will thus not be interfered with. We have likewise validated the levy of such duties now existing, which are numerous in certain parts of India.

21. In section 45 we have empowered the Local Government to exempt any particular class of timber from the operation of the section, partly in order not to interfere with the collection of drift wood for fuel, which is common among the poorer classes in certain localities.

22. We have recast the earlier sections of chapter IX, so as to bring them into closer conformity with similar provisions in other special laws.

23. In section 63 we have inserted a provision that no person shall be arrested for any act which is an offence under chapter IV, excepting for a violation of a prohibition under clause (c) of section 30.

24. In section 67 we have restricted the power of Forest-officers, as regards compounding, to the receipt of compensation for damage committed.

25. We have enlarged section 73 by empowering the Local Government to make rules regarding the rewards to be paid to officers and informers out of the proceeds of fines and confiscations, and for the preservation, reproduction and disposal of trees and timber belonging to Government but grown on lands belonging to, or in the occupation of, private persons.

26. We have inserted a new section (77) to enable the Government to enforce service in cases where persons are entitled to a share in the produce of forests on the condition of duly performing service in connection with such forests.

27. We have carefully considered the objections made by the Government of Madras to the original draft of the Bill which was circulated previous to its introduction into the Council. We are of opinion that the improvements which have now been made in both the language and matter of the Bill are so material as substantially to meet these objections, some of which were based on a misapprehension of what was intended. It appears to us that the Bill, especially considering the latitude for meeting local peculiarities which the power of making rules affords, is now not unsuitable to the circumstances of the Madras Presidency, and is such as might be accepted by the Local Government. At the same time, being permissive in its application, it contains nothing to prevent separate local legislation, if that course should be eventually preferred.

28. The publication ordered by the Council has taken place, but we consider republication to be desirable.

29. We recommend that the Bill as now amended be passed.

4 Whenever it is proposed to constitute any land a Reserved Forest, the Local Government shall publish a notification in the official Gazette—

(a) declaring that it is proposed to constitute such land a Reserved Forest,

(b) specifying the limits of such forest,

(c) appointing an officer (hereinafter called "the Forest Settlement Officer") to enquire into and determine the existence, nature and extent of any rights alleged to exist in favour of any person to or over any land comprised within such limits, or to or over any forest-produce, and to deal with the same as provided in this chapter

Provided that no such notification shall be made or work begun until after the issue of a notice to the owner of such forest or land, calling on him to show cause, within a reasonable period to be specified in such notice, why such notification should not be made or work constructed, and until his objections (if any) and any evidence he may produce in support of the same, have been heard by an officer duly appointed in that behalf, and have been considered by the Local Government.

36 In case of neglect of, or wilful disobedience to, any regulation or prohibition under section thirty-five, or if the purposes of any work to be constructed under that section so require, the Local Government may, after notice in writing to the owner of such forest or land, and after considering his objections (if any), place the same under the control of a Forest-officer, and may declare that all or any of the provisions of this Act relating to Reserved Forests shall apply to such forest or land.

All such duties, which, at the time when this chapter is extended to any territory, are levied therein under the authority of the Local Government, shall be deemed to be and to have been duly levied under the provisions of this Act

40 Nothing in this chapter shall be deemed to limit the amount chargeable as purchase-money or royalty on any timber or other forest-produce, although the same is levied

(e) provide for the establishment and regulation of depôts, to which such timber or other produce shall be taken by those in charge of it for examination, or for the payment of such money, or in order that such marks may be affixed to it, the conditions under which such timber or other produce shall be brought to, stored at, and removed from, such depôt,

43. The Government shall not be responsible for any loss or damage which may occur in respect of any timber or other forest-produce while at a depôt established under a rule made under section forty-one, or while detained elsewhere for the purposes of this Act, and no Forest-officer shall be responsible for any such loss or damage unless he causes such loss or damage negligently, maliciously or fraudulently.

44. In case of any accident or emergency involving danger to any property at any such depôt, every person employed at such depôt, whether by the Government or by any private person, shall render assistance to any Forest-officer or Police-officer demanding his aid in averting such danger and securing such property from damage or loss.

47. When any such statement is presented as aforesaid, the Forest-officer may, after making such enquiry as he thinks fit, either reject the claim after recording his reasons for so doing, or deliver the timber to the claimant.

If such timber is claimed by more than one person, the Forest-officer may either deliver the same to any of such persons whom he deems entitled thereto, or may refer the claimants to the Civil Courts, and retain the timber pending orders from any such Court for its disposal.

Any person whose claim has been rejected under this section may, within two months from the date of such rejection, institute a suit to recover possession of the timber claimed by him, but no person shall recover any compensation or costs against the Government, or against any Forest-officer, on account of such rejection, or the detention or removal of any timber, or the delivery thereof to any other person under this section.

No such timber shall be subject to process of any Civil, Criminal, or Revenue Court until it has been delivered, or a suit has been brought, as provided in this section.

48. If no such statement is presented as aforesaid, or if the claimant omits to prefer his claim in the manner and within the period prescribed by the notice issued under section forty-six, or, on such claim having been so preferred by him and having been rejected, omits to institute a suit to recover possession of such timber within the further period limited by section forty-seven, the ownership of such timber shall vest in the Government, or when such timber has been delivered to another person under section forty-seven, in such other person, free from all encumbrances.

50. No person shall be entitled to recover possession of any timber collected or delivered as aforesaid until he has paid to the Forest-officer or other person entitled to receive it such sums on account of the collection thereof as may be due under any rule made in pursuance of section fifty-one.

Statement No 34, regarding famine relief operations in the Province of Mysore, for the week ending the 29th September 1877

| Total                   | 1,751 |

|                    | Maximum in lbs per rupee |      | Minimum in lbs per rupee |      |

In Bangalore there has been a material fall in rice and ragi in both the maximum and minimum scales, ragi now selling at 14 and rice at 12 lbs per rupee Rice is cheapest in Bangalore, Kolar and Chitaldroog, and ragi in Kolar, Chitaldroog and Túmkúr. Local stores of ragi have been produced for sale in several districts.

4 The number of laborers on civil relief works was 31,038, or 242 less than in the previous week, but the returns having come in for the first time in a new form, the figures are not quite accurate There was an increase of 1,524 laborers in Bangalore and of 1,766 in Mysore, and a decrease of 1,066 in Túmkúr and of 1,015 in Chitaldroog The other variations were not remarkable.

5 Under the Public Works Department 27,655 laborers were employed, or an increase of 2,384 The increase was chiefly in Bangalore, whilst Kolar, Túmkúr, Hassan and Kadur shew a decrease Laborers continue to leave the works for field occupation, and officers report that in parts where prospects are most encouraging, people neither seek the works nor relief camps.

The State Railway is the only very large work in progress, and more than 7,000 are now working upon it. The Bangalore and Mysore water-supply projects occupy 3,000 between them; the other works are chiefly roads and tanks, some of which have only been recently commenced.

6 The numbers gratuitously fed in relief camps have again fallen and now amount to 126,204, or about the number returned for the week ending 7th July. The decrease is very general, but it is largest in the Bangalore, Túngúr, and Kolar districts. In the Bangalore Municipality there was a small increase —

7 The net decrease amounts to 35,688, and is due to the same causes which operated last week, namely, improved prospects, resumption of ordinary occupations, and stricter supervision of the camps. It is most marked in the districts to most benefited. More than 12,000 people are being employed near Bangalore, and as more work becomes available, further transfers from the relief camps can be made. The condition of the people on the works continues a marked contrast to their appearance in the relief camps. The orders to refuse no applicant continue in force.

The season continues to improve Eight talukas were mentioned last week as requiring more rain, and this week the number is reduced to four—three in Khandesh and one in Nasik The kharif crops have generally failed in those talukas in the north-west of Ahmednagar mentioned in the last statement but one as the worst

2 Prices are more fluctuating, but on the whole show further improvement

3 A decrease of 63,902 in the number of labourers upon relief works follows this week upon the decreases of 22,938 and 36,758 shown in the last two statements But about 25,000 of this week's decrease should strictly be divided among several preceding weeks, as it consists of the number of ordinary labourers engaged upon the Dhond and Manmad Railway, who have now for the first time been distinguished from the relief labourers upon the same work, and left out of account It is satisfactory to notice that the numbers are now getting less in every one of the nine districts

4 Cholera has now disappeared from all the affected districts, except Nasik and Ahmednagar In the last named district the number of deaths is increasing.

5 Weekly written reports received since the date of the last statement bring the detailed information in the case of the Nasik, Poona, Sholapur and Satara Collectories up to the 6th October, and in the case of the other five affected districts to the 29th September The usual rainfall table compiled from these reports is appended The kharif crops continue in good condition almost everywhere, but are suffering for want of rain in the south and the east of Khandesh, and in the north of Ahmednagar The same cause prevents the sowing of winter crops in some places in the same districts, while in others, particularly in Sholapur, Satara and Kaladgi, that work is impeded by excessive rain On the whole, however, the sowing of winter crops progresses satisfactorily, and where the only impediment is excessive rain, the same cause which now delays sowings serves also to extend the time for possible sowing

6 The following table gives the expenditure by Government, during the week ending 22nd September, upon gratuitous relief, and in payments made to the young children of labourers employed upon relief works. Comparing the results shown in the table below with those shown in the last statement, it will be seen that the number of persons in receipt of Government charitable relief has decreased from 97,694 to 96,083, while the number of children under 7 years of age has decreased from 64,654 to 55,072 The number of people charitably relieved was thus just half as many as the labourers upon relief works during the same week

8 Tables A and B are brought up to the week ending 29th ultimo. The number of persons on works under Public Works Department agency in the nine affected districts was at this date 140,157, and on works under Civil agency 24,855. The percentage of persons upon works under Civil agency has thus risen during the week from 11.7 to 15 per cent of the whole number employed. The total expenditure upon works in the nine affected districts has amounted to Rs 98,46,769, which, with the expenditure of Rs 1,20,667 upon works in Ratnagiri and Kanara, and Rs 8,20,732 from the Collectors' discretionary allowances, gives a total of Rs 1,07,88,168.

9 Maps are not sent with this summary.

10 From the appended table showing the condition of the affected Native States it will be seen that the accounts of the crops continue favourable, and that prices continue to fall. Little additional information has been received as regards the number of people upon the relief works.

11 During the week ending 6th October, 101 tons of food-grains were exported from Bombay to the Southern Mahratta ports, and 3,736 tons were carried by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway to stations upon the Poona-Sholapur and Bhusawal-Nasik lines, making a total of 3,837 tons for the week. This is less by 638 tons than the importations of the previous week. The table below shows the quantities of grain sent by sea and rail from October 1876 till the 6th October 1877 to the Southern Mahratta ports and the railway stations in the distressed districts. It will be seen that the total amount delivered up to the 6th October was 419,225 tons —

13 There is considerable improvement in the general situation, but the high prices still press heavily upon the poor.

STAMP BILL

The Hon'ble MR COCKERELL introduced the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Stamps and Court-fees and moved that it be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon. He said that, as a considerable period—nearly two years—had elapsed since leave was given to introduce a Bill on this subject, it seemed expedient that he should remind the Council of the scope of the former project of legislation and give some explanation of the circumstances which had delayed its progress and led to the proposal of the several further modifications of the present law provided for in the Bill now introduced. When their late colleague, Mr. Inglis, moved for leave to introduce a Bill for the alteration of the stamp law it was proposed to bring together the Stamp Act of 1869, the Court-fees Act, so much of Act XIII of 1875 as related to the fees leviable on probates and letters of administration, and the several exemptions and remissions of duty and fees which the Governor General in Council had in the exercise of the powers vested in him by the Stamp and Court-fees Acts from time to time allowed, and also to explain and amend the provisions of the existing law in regard to which questions had been raised, and interpretations and constructions laid down through the decisions and rulings of the Courts.

Such a measure of consolidation and amendment was in itself very necessary in the interest of the public convenience alone, for, between the year 1870 and the time when the Council was asked to sanction the introduction of a Bill relating to stamps and Court-fees, there had been hardly less than forty cases of remissions and reductions of duty and fees and other orders of Government relating to this subject, all constituting amendments of the existing law and scattered over numerous editions of the Gazette of India.

Before further progress in the desired legislation could be made, the much vexed question of the propriety and expediency of substituting the use of impressed for adhesive stamps, with the object of checking the frauds which were alleged to be prevalent to such an extent as to imperil the security of the revenue, became ripe for decision, and was referred to a Committee of which his honourable colleague (Mr Hope) and he (Mr. COCKERELL) were members. As the complete abandonment of the use of adhesive stamps in judicial proceedings would have necessitated very material alterations in the law relating to Court-fees, further action in the Legislative Department in respect of the Stamp Bill was suspended until the Committee had made its report. The opportunity was taken of referring also to the consideration of this Committee the question of the feasibility of such amendments of the stamp law as would conduce to its improved working and the acquisition of a larger revenue

About the same time that these questions were referred to the Committee, the Government of India through its Financial Department circulated certain proposals for the amendment of the law and directed the several Local Governments, after consulting their subordinate officers, to report thereon. Suggestions as to the propriety or expediency of other amendments were also invited. The main points referred thus for the opinion of the Local Governments were—(1) the omission from the Stamp Act of any specification of the description of stamp to be used for the realization of stamp duties or Court-fees, and the substitution therefor of a power to the Government to regulate the use of a particular description of stamp for specified purposes by rules; (2) the specification in the Act of fees of fixed amount chargeable for the service of processes in lieu of the present system under which those fees are determined by rules framed by the High Courts, and the restoration to the executive of the same power of regulating the process-serving establishments as it has in regard to all other establishments, and (3) the reservation to the Governor General in Council of the power of making rules under the Stamp and Court-fees Act, now exercised by the Local Governments subject to the sanction of the Government of India.

The local authorities returned an almost unanimous assent to the propriety and expediency of these proposals, and at the same time submitted their views as to other amendments of the law. The Committee specially appointed for the consideration of the questions above referred to submitted their report, this report was sent by the Home Department to the several Local Governments, and a fresh set of opinions on all the matters treated of in it was thus elicited.

The result of all this was that the entire subject of the revision of the stamp law had been considered and discussed in much detail by the local authorities, and he (MR. COCKERELL) had thus had the great advantage in framing those provisions of the Bill, which embraced amendments of the existing law, of consulting the two sets of opinions elicited from local officers engaged in the administration of the law and best qualified from their experience of its operation both to point out its practical defects and to suggest appropriate remedies. The proposed alterations of the law contained in the Bill were for the most part based upon such recommendations of the Committee as had met with the approval of the local authorities, and the suggestions of various officers, and he (MR. COCKERELL) had much confidence therefore in presenting the Bill to the Council as a measure which was, as regards its main features at least, in complete accordance with the views of the chief administrative officers of the several parts of the empire to which a general law on this subject would apply.

Though there was a general consensus of opinion in favour of the proposed legislation, objections had been raised in some quarters. For instance the expediency of reuniting in one Act the provisions of the law relating to stamp duties, and that by which Court-fees are regulated was questioned. It was said that the present practice of keeping these two subjects distinct had worked smoothly and satisfactorily, and was best adapted to public convenience, inasmuch as the classes of persons who were chiefly affected by, and interested in knowing the requirements of the law in regard to the use of general stamps, were not much concerned in litigation and the liabilities of suitors in the matter of the payment of Court-fees.

Now he (MR. COCKERELL) regarded stamp duties and Court-fees rather as different branches of the same subject than as two distinct subjects. The duties and the fees were both levied by means of stamps the sale proceeds of which were entered under the same head in the public accounts, and both were regulated by the same administrative agency. Nor could he agree with the conclusion that the persons who had to do with general stamps had little or no interest in the subject of Court-fees, he thought on the contrary that, a few purely commercial transactions involving the use of bills of exchange, bills of lading, &c., excepted, the agency employed for determining the proper stamp duties chargeable on instruments executed in connection with the conveyance of interests in property, or obligations for the payment of money, was generally the same as that to which persons about to engage in litigation would have recourse, for he believed that it was no more the practice to frame instruments evidencing the transfer of any interest in property, than to draw up a plaint in a suit or an application to a Court, without the aid of legal practitioners. On the other hand, there were distinct advantages in the combination of the existing enactments relating to stamp duties and Court-fees as the provisions of the law regarding the description of stamps to be used, the refund of the value of spoiled stamps, the sale of stamps and the general administration of these sources of revenue were common to both, so that a considerable saving in the enacting provisions would be effected by the proposed consolidation.

Then it had been urged that further legislation at the present time on the subject of stamps and Courts' fees was premature, and that these repeated alterations of laws affecting the transactions of a very large number of persons were extremely harassing and detrimental to public convenience. He would read to the Council what had been written by the person who might be said to be the most prominent if not the only exponent of this feeling —

"I hope that the Government will deprecate the passing of this measure. When the last General Stamp Act was passed in 1869 and the Court Fees Act in 1870, it was hoped that the wearisome and vexatious alterations of the law on these two subjects (of which there * Probably 1862 is meant, as no Stamp Act was passed in 1866. have been so many) had come to an end. The law of 1866,* to which the public and the profession were beginning to get accustomed, was completely altered in form, and the system of separating ordinary stamps from Court Fees adopted. I see no reason now for altering this system and re-uniting the Stamp Act with the Court Fees Act."

The writer of these remarks was a person who might reasonably have been expected to be better acquainted with the facts of the case. If it were true in any measure that the stamp laws did come under the frequent revision of the Legislature, it could hardly be a matter for surprise or reprobation, because the very fact that the law on such a subject affects the transactions of a very large number of persons and is on that account more used and subjected to greater wear and tear probably than any other Act on the Statute-book, indicates in itself the necessity for its periodical repair. But in order to show how much at variance with the real facts was the statement which he had just read, he (MR. COCKFELL) must have the indulgent forbearance of the Council whilst he entered into a very brief retrospect of past legislation in regard to stamps.

Up to 1860, the law regarding both branches of the stamp revenue was distinct in the different Presidencies, having been contained in certain Regulations of the Madras, Bombay and Bengal Codes respectively. Previously to that year the law had undergone no alteration in Bengal for a period of 31 years, in Bombay for 33, and Madras for 44 years, in the year 1860, the first general stamp law for all India was enacted, the Council would remember that the period was one of great financial pressure, when the Income-tax was first introduced and the tax-yielding resources of the Empire were being strained to the utmost limit feasible. The gross stamp revenue, which up to that time had not exceeded seventy lakhs of rupees, was in the first year's operation of Act XXXVI of 1860 almost doubled. It was hardly to be expected that such a great and sudden change of the law should be made without some mistakes, and accordingly in 1862 it was found necessary to amend the law for the purpose of remedying certain inequalities of taxation and undue pressure of particular duties caused by the previous Act, but the fresh legislation then adopted was entirely in the direction of the relief of the tax-payer and created no new burdens.

In 1866 there was a demand for strengthening judicial establishments, and it was thought that the cost of the measure might be met by a corresponding increase of the stamp-fees leviable on the institution of suits. A Committee was appointed in that year for the consideration of the subject, and the Act relating to stamp-fees levied in the Courts passed in 1867 was based on that Committee's recommendations. The Act of 1867 related to fees levied in the Courts by means of stamps and left untouched the law relating to general stamps.

In 1868, fresh legislation was commenced in regard to the subject of general stamps and resulted in the passing of the General Stamp Act of 1869. The object of the Act of 1867 had been not merely to provide for the cost of improving and strengthening the judicial establishments, but also to repress to a certain extent litigation of a frivolous and vexatious character which was said to have been partly encouraged by too low rates of Court-fees. The decrease in litigation, however, resulting apparently from the operation of the Act of 1867, was found to be so excessive as to justify the apprehension that the tentative rates of fees imposed thereby had over-reached the mark and amounted to a practical prohibition in many cases of legitimate redress of actual wrongs. Accordingly in 1870 a relieving measure was adopted, designated the "Court-fees Act," by which the fees theretofore chargeable on the majority of suits were reduced to the extent of about  $2\frac{1}{2}$  per centum. The Stamp Act of 1869 and the Court-fees Act of 1870 contained the law in force on these matters up to the present time. It would be seen therefore that the sum total of stamp-legislation during the last half century consisted of three Acts for the imposition of stamp duties and four Acts relating to Court-fees, whilst some of these measures had been adopted exclusively in the interest of the tax-payer. This indicated, in his opinion, the very reverse of a meddling spirit on the part of the legislature in dealing with this important subject, and established the groundless character of the animadversions upon the past legislation in connection with stamps of the writer of the letter which had been read, and the objection to the present measure founded thereon.

With these introductory remarks by way of explanation of the circumstances attending the proposed legislation on this subject, he would now pass to the consideration of the Bill before the Council.

The primary object of the Bill, as had been already explained, was the consolidation of all enactments in force treating of stamp duties or Court-fees. It was designed further to explain and simplify the requirements of the law in regard to these matters by large additions to the interpretation clauses, a clearer and more systematic arrangement of its several provisions, and a simpler classification of the documents liable to stamp duty or chargeable with Court fees enumerated in the schedules.

The most important amendments contemplated by the Bill had for their object the acquisition of a substantial increase of revenue. These provisions were of two kinds and might be described as (1) defensive, and (2) offensive. The former were by far the most important.

There was no branch of the revenue to which the law afforded so small a measure of protection as that of stamps, in the case of the excise, the inland customs, the sea customs and the opium revenue, the law armed the several officers responsible for the administration of those departments with large powers in aid of the realization of the revenue. They might search suspected persons and places for the purpose of discovering contraband practices and evasions of the requirements of the law. But in the case of stamps the revenue officer had no such power, public opinion would not uphold the authorization by law of the entry into houses and search of places where deeds and instruments were deposited, for the purpose of ascertaining whether documents liable to Stamp-duty had been properly stamped. Yet without some power of this kind the Collector of Stamp Revenue was practically almost helpless in regard to the prevention of frauds, and must wait till the possessor of an unstamped or insufficiently stamped document himself disclosed the breach of the law, by producing it before some Court or public officer.

In these circumstances it was only to be expected that the evasion of the payment of stamp duties and the loss of revenue resulting therefrom would be very great, and it should be the especial aim and object of a stamp law to render the available agency for the detection of evasions and securing their due punishment as effective as possible. The existing law as well as that which preceded it, contained express directions to Courts and public officers not to admit in evidence or in any way act upon documents which being liable to stamp duty were produced before them unstamped or insufficiently stamped, but in order to prevent undue harshness and excessive injury to individuals where the omission to use the necessary stamp arose out of ignorance rather than an attempt to evade the requirements of the law, it was enacted that the Collector or Civil Court—

"If satisfied that the omission to execute the instrument on properly stamped paper did not arise out of any intention to evade payment of the duty prescribed by law," might, on payment of the amount required to make up the full duty, together with the fixed penalty, which varied according to the circumstances of the case, cause the instrument to be stamped and thereafter treat it for evidence or other purposes as a valid instrument.

This in substance had been the law on this subject, with some unimportant variations as regards the amount of penalty to be levied in such cases, from the year 1860 up to the present time, and the only substantial difference in dealing with improperly stamped documents was that whilst the earlier Acts, although they prescribed the punishment to be awarded for the offence of under-stamping, made no provision as to the action to be taken by Civil Courts when they were not satisfied that the omission to use a proper stamp was otherwise than wilful, there was in the present law, which had been in force since 1869, an express direction to these Courts to impound the unstamped or insufficiently stamped document in such cases, and send it to the Collector in order that the offender might be criminally prosecuted.

Now these provisions had wholly failed to secure the object in view. There was abundant evidence to show that the Civil Courts before which instruments liable to stamp duties were most commonly produced, habitually ignored the obligation imposed upon them by the law to exercise due vigilance and discrimination for the protection of the interests of the revenue in this matter, he could cite numerous opinions which had been expressed by executive officers to this effect, but, inasmuch as the evidence of persons who were in some degree specially responsible for the due realization of the revenue might be open to the objection that it was interested and one-sided, he would merely bring before the Council, in support of the statement which he had made above, what judicial authorities of large experience had themselves to say on this subject.

A Judicial Commissioner in submitting his opinion in regard to needed amendments of the stamp law recommended the abolition of the power vested in Civil Courts to admit in evidence unstamped or insufficiently stamped documents, if satisfied that the default did not arise from an intention to evade payment of stamp duty. He said —

“I am satisfied that this power entails on Government a very serious loss of revenue. As a rule, documents are admitted or rejected without any enquiry as to the intention to evade payment of stamp duty, and although the Civil Courts are bound, on the admission of such documents, to levy the duty and penalty prescribed by the law, as a fact a great number of documents are admitted without payment of either duty or penalty. The Civil Courts should be bound to send all such documents to the Collector, and in the event of the Collector intimating that the requisite duty had not been paid within a time to be specified by the Court, the document should not be admitted in evidence.”

He would next read to the Council the opinion expressed by a very experienced and able District Judge in the Madras Presidency. That officer reporting on this subject said —

“With regard to the alterations of the stamp law proposed in paragraph 19 of the Committee's report, I have to observe that as far as my experience goes, the Courts of this country are not to be trusted with discretion in admitting in evidence improperly stamped or unstamped documents. Under the old law the Courts could admit such documents unless fraud was patent, and in practice I believe such documents invariably were admitted. The natural consequence was that almost every merchant and money-lender was willing to run the remote risk of having to pay a penalty in consideration of the present certain gain of cheating the Government.”

A Chief Commissioner also reported as follows —

“The Judicial Commissioner discusses at some length the provisions of the law regarding the admission by the Civil Courts of unstamped or insufficiently stamped documents, the levy of penalties, and the institution of criminal prosecutions. He says that the Courts are unduly lenient in admitting as evidence unstamped or insufficiently stamped documents, that as a rule such documents are admitted without enquiry and without payment, and that frequently a document which has been produced in a Civil Court is withdrawn when the penalty is demanded.”

Here then was complete evidence of an indisputable kind, not only as to the fact of the habitual reception by the Civil Courts exercising original jurisdiction of documents not bearing a proper stamp without any attempt at discrimination as to the character of the evasion of the use of a proper stamp, but also to the effect that the Courts wilfully defeated the intention of the law in constituting them agents for the discovery of offences against the revenue, by allowing persons who had committed such offences to withdraw the proofs of their criminality, without any determination of the question as to their liability to punishment.

The law directly prohibited the admission of unstamped documents in evidence as a means of discovering the omission to pay the proper stamp duty, but an offence was committed whenever an instrument was executed without the use of a proper stamp, and it was difficult to believe that the Courts could in good faith so misapprehend the object of the law as to suppose that the person producing an unstamped or insufficiently stamped instrument was not punishable for the omission to use a proper stamp so long as he did not elect to put the instrument in evidence.

To obviate as far as possible these causes of failure in the prevention of the evasions of the payment of stamp duties, a new course of procedure for dealing with unstamped documents was provided by the Bill. The Courts must still be used as the discovering agency, this could not be avoided as instruments liable to stamp duty were necessarily produced before them in far greater numbers than before any other authority. The Bill (section 30) required the Courts to examine every instrument produced before them liable to stamp duty and determine the question of it being properly stamped, whether it was required to be put in evidence or not. The subsequent sections of chapter IV of the Bill laid down the course to be followed in the case of documents not properly stamped, they must be impounded and sent to the Collector, but to prevent miscarriage of justice through the suppression of good evidence, such documents might be received in evidence on payment of deficient duty with interest and a certain amount by way of additional duty. In such cases a copy of the document would be sent to the Collector instead of the original and the liability to a criminal prosecution in respect of the under-stamping would be in no way affected by the circumstance that the instrument had on certain conditions been allowed to be put in evidence.

The prevalent disinclination of the Courts to presume fraudulent intention where an instrument not properly stamped was produced might, it was thought, be in great measure due to those provisions of the law which tended to invalidate wholly an instrument which had been wilfully under-stamped, and the consequent destruction of evidence involved in the finding by the Court that the under-stamping was fraudulent, it was perhaps natural that the Courts responsible for the administration of justice between litigants should manifest great reluctance to do anything by which good evidence would be destroyed, the new provisions of the Bill would relieve them of any embarrassment on this ground.

The aim and object of legislation in this direction was to give a deterrent rather than a vindictive power to the penal provisions of the law, and it was thought that the fear of a prosecution before the Magistrate and the infliction of criminal penalties would, if the contingency of such consequences of the evasion of the payment of stamp duties could be established as a potent factor in the calculations of the executants of instruments liable to such duties, be sufficiently repressive, and that there need be no recourse to the extreme measure of the invalidation of documents not properly stamped in ordinary cases.

The other provisions designed to secure an increase of revenue had been described as "offensive," by which he meant that they involved an enhancement of existing rates of duty in certain cases—a direct attack in short upon the pocket of the tax-payer!

As the most important amongst the changes of this kind, he might mention the increased duty which it was proposed to levy on bonds, conveyances and the like, where the amount involved exceeded Rs 1,000, on all bills of exchange, policies of insurance and instruments evidencing a contract for the repayment of loans made for short periods on the deposit of valuable securities, the abolition of the minimum rate now chargeable on bonds and the reduction of the limit of exemption from the payment of the one-anna duty on receipts for the payment of money in satisfaction of a debt.

The enhancement of the rates now chargeable on bonds, conveyances and similar instruments involving a large amount, bills of exchange and policies of insurance generally, could be justified on grounds of equity, for the alteration involved no more than the equalization of ad valorem rates generally, it would simply have the effect of bringing the rate of duty heretofore imposed on these documents up to the general standard of rates which had long been in force in regard to the large majority of instruments liable to ad valorem stamp duties

The large majority of documents, contributing the bulk of the revenue derived from "General Stamps," consisted of bonds, conveyances and other instruments similarly chargeable the amount involved in which did not exceed Rs 10,000. They were charged at an average rate of half and one per centum respectively on the maximum amount of the classes or ascents by which the assessment of the rate was regulated, but when the amount involved in the transaction in reference to which the instrument was executed, exceeded Rs 10,000, the rate of percentage of the duty on the amount taxed became gradually less. Now that was not the principle of the mode of assessment adopted under the stamp laws of England, there the rate of duty maintained the same proportion to the amount involved in the instrument subjected to the duty-charge without limit or reserve, and it was proposed to adopt a similar rule in this country. The change would cause a considerable increase in rates of duty charged on amounts exceeding Rs 10,000. As regards amounts exceeding Rs 1,000 and not exceeding Rs 10,000, some increase of rates would be entailed by the substitution of classes or steps of Rs 1,000 in lieu of those of 500 each on the maximum amount of which the percentage rate of duty was levied. This classification for the purpose of assessing the duty was also in conformity with the scale obtaining under the English law.

The proposed increase in the case of all bills of exchange and policies of insurance rested on the same grounds, those instruments had hitherto been taxed relatively to other documents subject to an ad valorem duty below English rates, the proportion which the Indian rates of duty chargeable on the general class of bonds and conveyances to the rates levied in England on similar instruments was not maintained in the case of bills and policies. He did not wish it to be supposed that the fact of the Indian rates being thus made, as regards all instruments subject to the ad valorem mode of charge, generally higher than the English rates, had been overlooked; they were intentionally made higher, because the former rates, though calculated to work satisfactorily where the transactions affected by the stamp law were numerous, would be wholly inadequate to the production of the required amount of revenue under the conditions of a far less extensive trade and commercial activity and the higher rates therefore had been necessarily adopted in this country.

His argument in support of the amendments of the law in regard to these duties was simply this, that, whereas the large mass of documents subjected to an ad valorem duty had borne the higher rates without objection from any quarter since the year 1860, the proposed enhancements were consistent with past legislation and based on equitable considerations, for they involved nothing more than an equalization of ad valorem rates in accordance with the heretofore generally prevailing standard and an increase only in respect of those instruments which tested by that standard had up to the present time been too lightly assessed. As regards policies of insurance he might add that the rates now proposed were in force previous to the passing of the Act of 1869.

The exemption of life policies which had been introduced by that Act with the view, he believed, of encouraging such insurances in this country as a provision for families, would not be continued. Insurance on lives was more commonly effected by way of security for loans, and there was no reason why such transactions should be protected from special taxation more than other commercial transactions.

The changes of which he had next to offer some explanation were in a contrary direction. In extenuation of the proposed abolition of the minimum rate of duty levied on bonds the equalization principle could not be pleaded. The increase of that rate from two to four annas was based on the consideration that as the transactions requiring the execution of instruments of that class, and involving very minute amounts were so numerous, a large increase of revenue would be obtained by the change without imposing an undue burden on the tax-payer. The four-annas rate was not now proposed for the first time, it was the minimum rate under the Act of 1860, but reduced by the Act of 1862. He could not find that any substantial reason had been adduced for such reduction, it was stated during the discussion in Council of the details of that Act, that the higher rate was too great and likely to induce evasion, but no grounds were assigned for this conclusion, and he could not see how a duty of four annas only could have any prohibitory influence on transactions of this class when a fee of double the amount was readily forthcoming in the case of every petty application to a Court of justice. As to the greater risk of evasion he entirely disbelieved that within certain moderate limits the rate of duty chargeable had anything to do with the matter. There could not be a lower rate of duty than the one anna chargeable on receipts and yet no duty probably was so constantly evaded.

The proposed reduction of the limit of exemption from the payment of duty in the case of receipts was dictated by similar considerations to those just stated in regard to bonds for small amounts. It was designed to obtain a substantial increase of revenue by the imposition of a very small rate of duty on a very large number of transactions.

The other proposed amendments were hardly of sufficient importance to justify his further detention of the Council by any detailed explanation in regard to them. He would only mention the suggested substitution of an ad valorem charge for the present low rate of fixed duty imposed on instruments contracting for the repayment of loans made on the deposit of valuable securities for short periods, and the new tax on certain members of the legal profession. It seemed clearly equitable and consistent with the general principle governing the imposition of stamp duties that these transactions should be taxed in reference to the amount of the accommodation obtained.

Advocates and attorneys were required in England to pay duty on the documents entitling them to practise their profession in the Courts of law, so also in this country Vakils and Mukhtars had for a long time been subject to the payment of stamp duty on their licenses or certificates which had to be renewed annually. There could be no reason consequently for continuing the exemption now enjoyed by advocates and attorneys of the High Courts, and it was proposed to tax them accordingly. The rates fixed by the Bill were not higher than those paid under analogous circumstances in England.

In regard to Court fees no changes were proposed except in the case of processes, to which he had already referred, and fees leviable on the institution of suits in Courts of Small Causes, and on probates and letters of administration. It was proposed to assimilate the Presidency Towns' rates in these last cases to those levied in the Courts of this class situated outside of the towns, by a depression of the former, and a corresponding elevation of the latter rates. The town-rate of institution-fee had hitherto been two annas per rupee, or 12½ per centum, whilst the mufassal rate was the same as that levied in other Civil Courts, namely, 7½ per centum on the amount sued for.

It was proposed to substitute an even 10 per centum as a mean rate for all Small Cause Courts. As he had spoken of the general provisions of the Bill as in accordance with the views of the local authorities, he should mention that their concurrence did not extend to the alteration of the rates of fees leviable in Small Cause Courts, or to the particular amount of fees to be charged for the service of processes, as provided by the Bill. These amendments of the existing law were inserted in the Bill at a late stage of its preparation and without consultation of local officers, they would need especial consideration, if the reduction of rates in the Presidency Town Courts was adopted in respect of institution-fees, those relating to the service of processes issuing from the same Courts would also need revision, and corresponding amendments of Act IX of 1850 would have to be made.

The duty leviable on probates and letters of administration had been introduced by the Act of 1870, and the rate then fixed, two per centum on the assets of the estate, was a purely tentative limit. It was thought that an additional half per centum might fairly be imposed, as compared with the rate at which these duties were levied in England, where legacy and succession duties were also in force, the estates of deceased persons in this country would still be most favoured. The annual income from these fees had now reached about five lakhs and might under the more developed operation of the Hindú Wills be expected to show a steady progressive increase.

It only remained to state his anticipations in regard to the increased revenue from stamps and Court-fees in the event of the adoption of the changes of the law provided for by the Bill. In regard to the results of the more stringent provisions of the Bill for the prevention of evasions, his estimate could only be in great measure conjectural, the present annual income from general stamps was under ninety lakhs, he thought therefore that he might take credit for eight lakhs or ten per centum on this head, the improved returns from the abolition of the present minimum rate on bonds would be about eight lakhs, the increased rates on bills of exchange might be expected to yield an additional income of about four lakhs, and that on bonds and conveyances involving amounts in excess of Rupees 1,000 about two lakhs.

The increase to be expected from the reduced limit of exemption in the case of receipt stamps, and from the additional duty to be imposed on probates, letters of administration and certificates, together with the alteration of the institution-fees in Courts of Small Causes, amounted to about five lakhs.

He trusted that these proposals would be regarded as moderate, and that they would be accepted by the public as providing for a substantial progressive increase of the stamp revenue, without imposing an undue burden upon the tax-payer.

He did not propose to refer the Bill at present to a Select Committee. It was one of those measures which would not ordinarily be brought forward at Simla, and his only object in introducing it now was to secure its early publication and give as much publicity as possible to the proposed amendments of the law ere the Bill came under the consideration of a Select Committee in Calcutta.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR COCKERELL also moved that the Bill be published in the Gazette of India in English, and in the local Gazettes in English and in such other languages as the Local Governments should direct.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

MADRAS DISTRICT JUDGES BILL

The Hon'ble MR STOKES introduced the Bill to enable the District Judges of the Presidency of Fort St George to suspend and remove certain ministerial officers, and for other purposes, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee. He said that this Bill, like the rest of the business down in his name on to-day's list, was a small matter, and inasmuch as (to quote Herrick) "a little stream best suits a little boat," he would trouble the Council with a very short speech about it. The first section of the Bill was, as he had already explained, intended to give the District Judges in Madras the power which District Judges possessed in other parts of India of suspending and removing the ministerial officers of Subordinate Judges and Munsifs. The second and last section was copied from the Bengal Civil Courts Act, 1871, section 37, and would enable District Judges to transfer ministerial officers from one Munsif's Court to another in the same district. As had been remarked in a letter which he had received from the late Acting District Judge of Trichinopoly, "It often happens that, while there is not sufficient reason for removal, it is very expedient to break up a set of subordinates who have begun to intrigue."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR STOKES also moved that the Bill be published in the Gazette of India in English, and in the Fort St George Gazette in English and in such other languages as the Local Government should direct.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

PANJÁB LAWS ACT AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR STOKES also moved for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Panjáb Laws Act, 1872. He said that the North-Western Provinces Land-Revenue Act, sections 193 and 194, provided for the superintendence, by the Board of Revenue as a Court of Wards, of the persons and property of seven classes of persons. Of these the first four classes were disqualified females, minors, idiots and lunatics.

The PRESIDENT asked what, technically, was the difference between an idiot and a lunatic.

The Hon'ble MR STOKES replied that an idiot was one that has had no understanding from his birth, a lunatic was one that has had understanding, but has lost the use of his reason. The fifth, sixth and seventh classes were persons incapable, from physical defects or infirmities, to manage their own estates; persons convicted of a non-bailable offence and disqualified, by vice or bad character, from managing their estates; and persons declared by the Local Government, on their own application, to be disqualified from managing their estates. The provisions relating to the seventh class had been found extremely useful in the North-Western Provinces, and had been largely brought into effect. Now the Panjáb Laws Act provided locally for the first four of these classes but it said nothing about the fifth, sixth or seventh, and inconvenience had recently been felt owing to the inability of the Local Government to comply with the request of a certain eminent but impetuous Sikh Guru, (the head of the Sodhi family, the custodian of what was regarded as the original copy of the Granth), who, feeling himself disqualified to manage his own estates, had applied that Government should assume the administration of his property and arrange for the liquidation of his debts. The primary object of the Bill which MR STOKES now asked leave to introduce was to supply this defect in the law of the Panjáb.

Another amendment, suggested by section 173 of the Oudh Land-Revenue Act, 1876, was the addition of a clause providing that persons whose property was under the superintendence of the Court of Wards should not be competent to create, without the sanction of the Court, any charge upon, or interest in, such property or any part thereof. It was obvious that there was not much use in trying to settle the affairs of an insolvent landholder if, during the process of liquidation, he was allowed to incur fresh debts and charge his property therewith.

Lastly, the opportunity would be taken to make the correction in the drafting of section 5 of the Panjáb Laws Act, to which he had referred on a previous occasion.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES LAND-REVENUE ACT AMENDMENT BILL

The Hon'ble MR STOKES also moved for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the North-Western Provinces Land-Revenue Act, 1873. He said that the chief object of this Bill was to make in the North-Western Provinces one of the amendments of the law which he had just mentioned as necessary in the Panjab, that is to say, to render disqualified proprietors incapable of entering into certain contracts save with the sanction of the Court of Wards. The Bill had been framed at the request of the Local Government, and the opportunity would be taken to make a verbal amendment in section 194 of the Act, and to clear up a doubt as to the effect of section 29.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS BILL

The Hon'ble MR STOKES also presented the preliminary Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to define and amend the law relating to Promissory Notes, Bills of Exchange and Cheques.

PANJÁB COURTS BILL

The Hon'ble MR STOKES also presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Courts in the Panjab.

The following Select Committee was named —

On the Bill to enable the District Judges of the Presidency of Fort St George to suspend and remove certain ministerial officers, and for other purposes,—the Hon'ble Sir Edward Bayley, the Hon'ble Mr Cockerell and the Mover.

The Council adjourned to Wednesday, the 17th October 1877.

FIBRES AND SILK

No. 45 —In 1871 the Government of India offered a prize of £5,000 to the inventor of the best machine or process for the preparation of the fibre of the Bombyx mori (popularly known under the names of Rhea, Ramie, and China grass), and the terms on which machines would be admitted to competition were widely notified in India, in Europe, and in America. Many persons declared their intention to compete, but ultimately only one machine was actually brought to the place of trial. The machine having been carefully tested at Saharanpur in the autumn of 1872, was found imperfect in some important respects, and the inventor was adjudged not entitled to the full reward. He was, however, presented with £1,500 in consideration of the partial measure of success he had attained after great perseverance

2 This machine has not since been adapted by the inventor to practical use, and no improved process of preparing the fibre of the rhea has been yet discovered by other persons. Meanwhile the demand for rhea continues and the conditions which induced the Government of India in 1871 to offer a prize remain substantially unchanged.

3 His Honour the President in Council therefore considers that it is desirable to renew the offer, and it is accordingly hereby notified that a reward of fifty thousand rupees will be paid to the inventor of the best machine or process which will separate the bark and fibre from the stem, and the fibre from the bark, of the Bhomeria nuga.

4 A smaller reward not exceeding ten thousand rupees will be given to the inventor of the next best machine or process, provided it is adjudged to possess merit and to be capable without difficulty of adaptation to practical use.

5 What is required is a machine or process capable of producing, by animal, water, or steam power, a ton of dressed fibre of a quality which shall average in value not less than £15 per ton in the English market, at a total cost including all processes of preparation and all needful allowance for wear and tear, of not more than £15 per ton, laid down at any port of shipment in India and £30 in England, after payment of all the charges usual in trade before goods reach the hands of the manufacturer. The processes of preparation are to be understood to include all the operations required subsequent to the cutting of the stems from the plants in the field, until the fibre is in a condition fit to be packed for conveyance to the market.

6 The machinery employed must be simple, strong, durable, and inexpensive, and should be suited for erection in the plantations where the rhea is grown. It must be adapted for treatment of the fresh stems, as cut from the plant. The treatment of dried stems offers certain difficulties and the fibre prepared from them must moreover always be much more costly than the fibre produced from green stems. Except during the hot dry weather preceding the rains in Upper India (where rhea grows best), it is very difficult so to dry the stems that no fermentation or mildew shall occur. But during this season the stems are comparatively short and the crop poor and stunted, unless it is artificially irrigated, and such irrigation greatly increases the cost of cultivation. In the rainy season the plant is in fine condition, but at this season it is almost impossible to dry the stems in quantity without injuring the fibre unless recourse is had to artificial means of desiccation, which greatly increase the cost of the material. It is therefore obvious that the attention of inventors should be given to the discovery of a process for the treatment of the green stems.

7 The trials will be held at Saharanpur in the North-Western Provinces, in the months of August and September 1879. Machines entered for competition should be placed in situ and be ready for work not later than the 15th August, the competition commencing on the next day. The judges will be appointed by the Government, and they will watch the whole of the trials. But the machines shall be worked and adjusted by the competitors themselves, and no person shall touch a machine without the consent of the inventor.

8 The Government of India will provide proper shelter and accommodation at Saharanpur for all the competing machines as well as the motive power required. It will also pay for the transport from the sea-coast to Saharanpur of all machines up to the limit of one ton each, the freight on any excess weight to be defrayed by the owners. The present rate of freight by rail from Calcutta to Saharanpur is Rs 3-10 per maund or Rs 98-11 per ton, and from Bombay to Saharanpur Rs 4-1 per maund or Rs 110-9 per ton. A free second class ticket to Saharanpur will also be given to any person in charge of a machine.

9 The owner or owners of the successful machine or machines shall not be entitled to receive the reward offered except on the following conditions, viz—

- (1)—That a complete technical description of the machine, illustrated by plans drawn to scale, shall be prepared and published (Government paying the cost) for the information of the public.

FIBRES AND SILK

No 45—In 1871 the Government of India offered a prize of £5,000 to the inventor of the best machine or process for the preparation of the fibre of the Bohmeria nivea (popularly known under the names of Rhea, Ramie, and China grass), and the terms on which machines would be admitted to competition were widely notified in India, in Europe, and in America. Many persons declared their intention to compete, but ultimately only one machine was actually brought to the place of trial. The machine having been carefully tested at Saharanpur in the autumn of 1872, was found imperfect in some important respects, and the inventor was adjudged not entitled to the full reward. He was, however, presented with £1,500 in consideration of the partial measure of success he had attained after great perseverance.

2 This machine has not since been adapted by the inventor to practical use, and no improved process of preparing the fibre of the rhea has been yet discovered by other persons. Meanwhile the demand for rhea continues and the conditions which induced the Government of India in 1871 to offer a prize remain substantially unchanged.

3 His Honour the President in Council therefore considers that it is desirable to renew the offer, and it is accordingly hereby notified that a reward of fifty thousand rupees will be paid to the inventor of the best machine or process which will separate the bark and fibre from the stem, and the fibre from the bark, of the Bhomeria nivea.

4 A smaller reward not exceeding ten thousand rupees will be given to the inventor of the next best machine or process, provided it is adjudged to possess merit and to be capable without difficulty of adaptation to practical use.

5 What is required is a machine or process capable of producing, by animal, water, or steam power, a ton of dressed fibre of a quality which shall average in value not less than £45 per ton in the English market, at a total cost including all processes of preparation and all needful allowance for wear and tear, of not more than £15 per ton, laid down at any port of shipment in India and £30 in England, after payment of all the charges usual in trade before goods reach the hands of the manufacturer. The processes of preparation are to be understood to include all the operations required subsequent to the cutting of the stems from the plants in the field, until the fibre is in a condition fit to be packed for conveyance to the market.

6 The machinery employed must be simple, strong, durable, and inexpensive, and should be suited for erection in the plantations where the rhea is grown. It must be adapted for treatment of the fresh stems, as cut from the plant. The treatment of dried stems offers certain difficulties and the fibre prepared from them must moreover always be much more costly than the fibre produced from green stems. Except during the hot dry weather preceding the rains in Upper India (where rhea grows best), it is very difficult so to dry the stems that no fermentation or mildew shall occur. But during this season the stems are comparatively short and the crop poor and stunted, unless it is artificially irrigated, and such irrigation greatly increases the cost of cultivation. In the rainy season the plant is in fine condition, but at this season it is almost impossible to dry the stems in quantity without injuring the fibre unless recourse is had to artificial means of desiccation, which greatly increase the cost of the material. It is therefore obvious that the attention of inventors should be given to the discovery of a process for the treatment of the green stems.

7 The trials will be held at Saharanpur in the North-Western Provinces, in the months of August and September 1879. Machines entered for competition should be placed in situ and be ready for work not later than the 15th August, the competition commencing on the next day. The judges will be appointed by the Government, and they will watch the whole of the trials. But the machines shall be worked and adjusted by the competitors themselves, and no person shall touch a machine without the consent of the inventor.

8 The Government of India will provide proper shelter and accommodation at Saharanpur for all the competing machines as well as the motive power required. It will also pay for the transport from the sea-coast to Saharanpur of all machines up to the limit of one ton each, the freight on any excess weight to be defrayed by the owners. The present rate of freight by rail from Calcutta to Saharanpur is Rs 3-10 per maund or Rs 98-11 per ton, and from Bombay to Saharanpur Rs 4-1 per maund or Rs 110-9 per ton. A free second class ticket to Saharanpur will also be given to any person in charge of a machine.

9 The owner or owners of the successful machine or machines shall not be entitled to receive the reward offered except on the following conditions, viz —

- (1)—That a complete technical description of the machine, illustrated by plans drawn to scale, shall be prepared and published (Government paying the cost) for the information of the public
- (2)—That after the expiry of three years from the date on which the award is made the public shall have the right of manufacturing similar machines, on payment to the owner of a royalty of 10 per cent on the cost of each machine so manufactured

- 1 Name in full and residence
- 2 Profession or occupation
- 3 Number of different kinds of machines entered for competition
- 4 Brief description of each machine

Intending competitors will at the same time declare themselves bound (under penalty of disqualification of the competing machines and forfeiture of all claim to the Government reward) to conform to all rules which may be prescribed by Government or by the judges appointed by Government in connection with the conduct of the trials

All notices of intention to compete and applications for information should be addressed to the Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce, Calcutta

FIBRE AND SILK

No 45—In 1871 the Government of India offered a prize of £5,000 to the inventor of the best machine or process for the preparation of the fibre of the Bomarea nivea (popularly known under the names of Rhea, Ramie, and China grass), and the terms on which machines would be admitted to competition were widely notified in India, in Europe, and in America. Many persons declared their intention to compete, but ultimately only one machine was actually brought to the place of trial. The machine having been carefully tested at Saharanpur in the autumn of 1872, was found imperfect in some important respects, and the inventor was adjudged not entitled to the full reward. He was, however, presented with £1,500 in consideration of the partial measure of success he had attained after great perseverance.

2. This machine has not since been adapted by the inventor to practical use, and no improved process of preparing the fibre of the rhea has been yet discovered by other persons. Meanwhile the demand for rhea continues and the conditions which induced the Government of India in 1871 to offer a prize remain substantially unchanged.

3. His Honour the President in Council therefore considers that it is desirable to renew the offer, and it is accordingly hereby notified that a reward of fifty thousand rupees will be paid to the inventor of the best machine or process which will separate the bark and fibre from the stem, and the fibre from the bark, of the Bomarea nivea.

4. A smaller reward not exceeding ten thousand rupees will be given to the inventor of the next best machine or process, provided it is adjudged to possess merit and to be capable without difficulty of adaptation to practical use.

5. What is required is a machine or process capable of producing, by animal, water, or steam power, a ton of dressed fibre of a quality which shall average in value not less than £45 per ton in the English market, at a total cost including all processes of preparation and all needful allowance for wear and tear, of not more than £15 per ton, laid down at any port of shipment in India and £30 in England, after payment of all the charges usual in trade before goods reach the hands of the manufacturer. The processes of preparation are to be understood to include all the operations required subsequent to the cutting of the stems from the plants in the field, until the fibre is in a condition fit to be packed for conveyance to the market.

6. The machinery employed must be simple, strong, durable, and inexpensive, and should be suited for erection in the plantations where the rhea is grown. It must be adapted for treatment of the fresh stems, as cut from the plant. The treatment of dried stems offers certain difficulties and the fibre prepared from them must moreover always be much more costly than the fibre produced from green stems. Except during the hot dry weather preceding the rains in Upper India (where rhea grows best), it is very difficult so to dry the stems that no fermentation or mildew shall occur. But during this season the stems are comparatively short and the crop poor and stunted, unless it is artificially irrigated, and such irrigation greatly increases the cost of cultivation. In the rainy season the plant is in fine condition, but at this season it is almost impossible to dry the stems in quantity without injuring the fibre unless recourse is had to artificial means of desiccation, which greatly increase the cost of the material. It is therefore obvious that the attention of inventors should be given to the discovery of a process for the treatment of the green stems.

7. The trials will be held at Saharanpur in the North-Western Provinces, in the months of August and September 1879. Machines entered for competition should be placed in situ and be ready for work not later than the 10th August, the competition commencing on the next day. The judges will be appointed by the Government, and they will watch the whole of the trials. But the machines shall be worked and adjusted by the competitors themselves, and no person shall touch a machine without the consent of the inventor.

8 The Government of India will provide proper shelter and accommodation at Saháranpur for all the competing machines as well as the motive power required. It will also pay for the transport from the sea-coast to Saháranpur of all machines up to the limit of one ton each, the freight on any excess weight to be defrayed by the owners. The present rate of freight by rail from Calcutta to Saháranpur is Rs 3-10 per maund or Rs 95-11 per ton, and from Bombay to Saháranpur Rs 4-1 per maund or Rs 110-9 per ton. A free second class ticket to Saháranpur will also be given to any person in charge of a machine.

9 The owner or owners of the successful machine or machines shall not be entitled to receive the reward offered except on the following conditions, viz —

- (1)—That a complete technical description of the machine, illustrated by plans drawn to scale, shall be prepared and published (Government paying the cost) for the information of the public.
- (2)—That after the expiry of three years from the date on which the award is made the public shall have the right of manufacturing similar machines, on payment to the owner of a royalty of 10 per cent on the cost of each machine so manufactured.

10 All persons desiring to compete under the terms and on the conditions specified above are requested to make known their intention not later than the 31st December 1878, giving the following particulars —

- 1 Name in full and residence
- 2 Profession or occupation
- 3 Number of different kinds of machines entered for competition
- 4 Brief description of each machine

Intending competitors will at the same time declare themselves bound (under penalty of disqualification of the competing machines and forfeiture of all claim to the Government reward) to conform to all rules which may be prescribed by Government or by the judges appointed by Government in connection with the conduct of the trials.

All notices of intention to compete and applications for information should be addressed to the Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce, Calcutta.

 Note by the Honble T. C. Hope dated 4th October 1877

and amend the laws relating to the administration of the Department of Sea Customs in India was referred, have the honour to report that we have considered the Bill and the papers specified in the margin

2 In accordance with the suggestion of the Committee appointed by the Bombay Government, the definition of "Customs-port" has been made (section 3, clauses (d) and (e)) to include, and that of "Foreign Port" to exclude, ports not in British India which are entitled to be treated as British Customs-ports

3 The existing Act limits the privileges of coasting vessels to vessels which do not touch at any intermediate foreign port But this has been found difficult of application, especially on the Western Coast, where foreign ports are numerous, and the limitation is illegally evaded in the case of coasting steamers. But the Bombay Committee point out that all craft ought to be treated alike, and we think that, where there is danger of smuggling, special restrictions may be imposed on particular classes of goods under the powers of chapter XIII. The definition (section 3, clause (g)) has therefore been expanded

4 We have also enlarged the definition of "Master" (section 3, clause (h)) so as to include a ship's agent appointed in writing by the master to be responsible on his behalf, when such appointment is approved by the Customs-collector

5 In consequence of representations received from the Chief Commissioner of British Burma of the expediency of legalising coasting trade with petty ports which it would not pay to constitute Customs-ports, a provision has been inserted in section 11, with the concurrence of the Department of Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce, enabling the Local Government to recognize such ports for the purposes of the coasting trade only

6 In accordance with a recommendation of the Bombay Committee, a clause framed on the model of the English Customs Act of 1876, section 153, has been added to section 17 of the Bill, prohibiting the importation or exportation of articles of foreign manufacture bearing names, marks or brands being, or purporting to be, those of manufacturers resident in the United Kingdom or British India

7 By a little condensation, the whole of chapter X of the Bill as introduced has been dispensed with. The privilege of transshipment has been extended to sailing vessels.

8 By section 38, an owner not having sufficient information regarding any goods has been allowed, as suggested by the Bengal Board of Revenue, to deposit them temporarily in a warehouse

The term "real value" has also been defined, as the want of a definition has been much felt. The obligation to declare real value has likewise, for statistical purposes, been extended to all goods, whether dutiable or not

9 The third clause of section 39, by which it is provided that undervalued goods retained for the use of Government shall be sold by public auction, has given rise to some difference of opinion, some authorities advocating the substitution of a general power to dispose of the goods for the benefit of Government, in accordance with the English Customs Act of 1853. We have reserved this question for further consideration after enquiry as to the alleged rarity of cases in which difficulty or loss to Government is occasioned by the present provision

10 Sections 45 and 46 (33 and 34 of the Bill as introduced) have also elicited wide differences of opinion between different mercantile and Custom-house authorities. The former section is identical in principle with the existing English law section 20 of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876, runs as follows —

"In the event of any increase, decrease, or repeal of duties of customs chargeable upon any goods or commodities after the making of any contract or agreement for the sale or delivery of such goods duty paid, it shall be lawful for the seller, in case such increase shall accrue before the clearance and delivery from the warehouse of such goods at such increased duty, and after payment thereof, to add so much money to the contract-price as will be equivalent to such increase of duty, and he shall be entitled to be paid and to sue for and recover the same, and it shall be lawful for the purchaser under any such contract or agreement, in case such decrease or repeal shall take effect before the clearance and delivery from the warehouse at such decreased duty, or free of duty, as the case may be, to deduct so much money from the contract-price as will be equivalent to such decrease of duty or repealed duty, and he shall not be liable to pay or be sued for or in respect of such deduction."

The latter section is in harmony with Mr Wilson's financial statement of February 18th, 1860, and the consequent section 2 of Act X of 1860, as also with the notification of the Government of India, No 3180, dated 3rd September 1875. Both sections originated in the memorials and representations which the Government of India is in the habit of receiving whenever a change of tariff takes place. We have added another illustration to section 45, to express its scope more fully, but we have left the general question of the retention of both sections open for discussion in Calcutta.

11 We have omitted from section 50 (121 of the Bill as introduced) the last clause, which followed the existing law, as it has been justly pointed out by Mr Lane, the Collector of Customs at Calcutta, that it is unreasonable to refuse drawback on ships' stores, and both inconsistent with the permission to export from bond (section 30) and at variance with the English Act.

12 In deference to the unanimous opinion expressed in the reports, the rate of drawback has been re-entered in section 50 at the existing rate of seven-eighths, instead of three-fourths, to which it was raised in the Bill as introduced.

13 In accordance with representations received from the Bombay Committee and other quarters, we have, with the concurrence of the Department of Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce, extended to the Indian Marine and Marine Survey (section 56) the privileges with regard to wine, provisions and stores which have hitherto been confined to officers and ships of Her Majesty's Navy. The privilege has likewise been extended in all cases to spirits.

14 In order to meet the case of the foreign ports of Native States on the Western Coast, which are not surrounded by customs preventive lines, the existing practice of refusing drawback on exports to such ports has been legalised (section 57) in the form of empowering the Governor General in Council to prohibit drawback in the case of any particular port. This is in accordance with the Bombay Committee's suggestion.

15 In accordance with the existing practice at Bombay, which originated in section 35 of Act I of 1852, the Customs-collector has been empowered (section 58) to reject, if he sees fit, any claim for drawback amounting to less than ten rupees. The Bombay Municipal Act provides similarly regarding petty refunds of town-duty.

16 Section 44 of the Bill as introduced was inserted in consequence of a long correspondence which arose in Bombay with the Chamber of Commerce out of the practice prevailing there of masters entering in the manifest the names of the ships' agents as consignees of the cargo, and the true consignees complaining of delay in receiving their goods and of the departure of the vessel in the interim. The Bombay Committee, however, now find that the section will not meet the case, and, though it is not objected to by Bengal and Madras (chiefly, it would seem, owing to difference of circumstances), we think it better to omit it, and to obviate the difficulty partly by an addition to section 71, permitting port-clearance to be refused except on security for the clearance of the import-manifest, and partly by new provisions in chapter IX, which will be explained hereafter.

17 Section 64 is new, to adapt the law to actual circumstances, under which the manifest sometimes arrives by overland mail before the vessel itself, in which case the saving of time by commencing the preliminaries for her discharge is desirable.

18 Section 71—The Madras Committee recommend the addition of a clause authorising the refusal of port-clearance to any vessel the master or agents of which have not made all reasonable endeavours to land all the cargo for the port. Formerly, they say, they could stop a vessel through the High Court, or bring an action for overcarrying their goods, but now canal steamers protect themselves by a clause in the bill of lading. The Madras Trades Association support this recommendation by a letter (Paper No 9) giving details of packages actually overcarried. On the other hand, overcarrying is defended on the grounds, 1st, that boats are scarce at Madras, 2nd, that boatwork is there prohibited after sundown, 3rd, that mail-contracts prevent steamers making long delays. We have reserved this question for discussion at Calcutta.

19 Section 75—In accordance with the recommendations of the Calcutta Committee and the Bengal Board, the periods of unloading and loading have been combined, but the aggregate of 30 days has been reduced to 20. The additional periods for loading and unloading have also each been reduced to one day for every 100 tons instead of every 50. This will still leave a vessel of 1,200 tons, for instance, 32 days, which is ample. Sections 50 and 108 of the Bill as introduced have been consolidated into this section, and words have been inserted to prevent more than one officer at a time being claimed as of right when, from smallness of establishment or press of work, extra officers may not be available.

20 Sections 76 and 77—Special provision has been made in the concluding clauses for goods being water-borne from places not duly appointed as wharves, and without the presence or authority of an officer of customs, as also without boat-notes, in order to meet the circumstances of Calcutta, as represented by the Board of Revenue. In section 77, the suggestions from Burma have also been attended to, and sections 61 and 125 of Act VI of 1863 (Bill I, sections 53, 58 and 111) have been amalgamated.

21. Sections 97 and 98—These are the new sections inserted, and referred to above in paragraph 16, in order to permit the prompt discharge of cargo where there is urgent necessity, or there are special facilities, for it. We are disposed to consider that a provision of this nature is the best for meeting the difficulties now felt and reconciling the conflicting interests of ship-owners and owners or consignees of goods. The latter are protected from double charges for agency. The sections, however, are tentative, and may require amendment after they have been scrutinized by the Trade and the Customs Departments at Bombay and Calcutta.

22 Adverting to section 106, we have altered the form of the bond, in accordance with a suggestion from Madras, so as to allow of enforcement in a District Court instead of in the High Court, though this was really not indispensable, since any of the forms may, even under the existing Act, be modified by the Chief Customs Authority.

23 Section 107—In accordance with a suggestion from British Burma, arising out of an opinion by the Advocate General, a clause has been added to make it clear that a fresh bond is not indispensable on every fresh removal of the goods while in warehouse.

24 Section 116—Permission to bottle off wines and spirits has been added, in conformity with the English Act and suggestions from Bengal.

25 Section 132—This section has been modified in accordance with suggestions from Bengal, so as to place recovery of rent on the same footing as recovery of duty.

26 Section 137 has been modified to suit Calcutta, in the same way as sections 76 and 77 (vide supra, paragraph 20).

27 Section 140—In order to obtain correct statistics of imports and exports, it has been made compulsory on the owner of goods short-shipped or re-landed to give information of the fact to the Custom-house. This is in accordance with recommendations received and with the English law regarding short shipments.

28 Chapter XVIII of the Bill as introduced, which was entitled "Offences and Penalties," has elicited some differences of opinion as to what was the best position in the Act for such matters. We have now, in the first place, transferred to a separate chapter everything relating to procedure. With regard to the offences and penalties themselves, we are of opinion that the chief thing to be considered is the convenience of the mercantile and nautical public rather than that of adjudicating officers. Anybody who wishes honestly to know what the law requires him to do, will find his study of the existing Act perpetually interrupted by the long offence and penalty clauses, the tenors of which it cannot be indispensable to place in close juxtaposition with every injunction or obligation.

We have now recast the chapter (XIV) in tabular form, shewing in three columns the offence, the section to which it has reference, and the penalty, and trust that this will meet the views of all parties. To the adjudicating officer it will, we believe, not be inconvenient, to the public it will be a relief not to have every section burdened with unnecessary matter, while Custom-house officials may, if they wish, have the chapter printed separately to hand to every master on arrival, or to frame and post up in conspicuous places at the Custom-house and wharves.

29 We have made numerous changes in the phraseology of the Bill throughout, to secure both clearness and brevity. Considerable alterations have also been made in the arrangement of chapters and sections, with the view both of condensation and of bringing analogous provisions together and securing a practical sequence. The chapters now stand as follows:—

- Chapter I—Preliminary
- " II—Appointment of officers in the Department of Customs
- " III—Appointment of ports, wharves, custom-houses, warehouses and boarding and landing-stations
- " IV—Restrictions and prohibitions of importation and exportation
- " V—Levy of, and exemption from, customs-duties
- " VI—Drawback
- " VII—Arrival and departure of vessels
- " VIII—General provisions affecting vessels in port, &c
- " IX—Importation or discharge

- " XI—Exportation or shipment, and re-landing
- " XII—Spirits
- " XIII—Coasting trade
- " XIV—Offences and penalties
- " XV—Procedure relating to offences, appeals, &c

30 We propose to consider the Bill further in Calcutta, and recommend that it be in the meantime published in the Gazette of India for general information.

And thereupon such person shall produce any such document or furnish any such information so required by such officer

Provided that, if the owner makes a declaration before the Customs-collector to the effect that he is unable, from want of full information, to state the real value or contents of any case, package or parcel of goods, then the Customs collector shall permit him, previous to the entry thereof (1) to open such case, package or parcel, and examine the contents in presence of an officer of Customs, or (2) to deposit such case, package or parcel in a public warehouse, pending production of such information

If, in any river or Port wherein a place has been fixed by the Local Government under this section, the Master of any vessel arriving from any Foreign Port remains outside or below the place so fixed, such Master shall, nevertheless, within twenty-four hours after the vessel anchors, deliver such manifest to the Pilot, officer of Customs or other person authorized to receive the same

62 If any vessel, coming from any Foreign Port, arrives at any Customs-port in which a place has not been so fixed, the Master of such vessel shall, within twenty-four hours after anchoring, deliver a manifest to the Pilot, officer of Customs, or other person authorized to receive the same

63 Every manifest shall be signed by the Master, and shall contain a true specification of all goods imported in such vessel, comprising such particulars, and made out in such form, as the Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time direct

The Customs-collector may permit the Master to amend any obvious error in the manifest, or to supply any omission resulting from accident or inadvertence, by furnishing an amended or supplementary manifest

But the receiving of such amended or supplementary document shall be discretionary with such Customs-collector, and, if he decide to receive any such amended or supplementary manifest, he may levy thereon such fee as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time directs

64 Nothing contained in section 61, 62 or 63 shall prevent the delivery of the manifest, previous to the arrival of the vessel, by an agent duly appointed and approved, as defined in section 3, clause (h), of this Act

65 The Pilot, officer or other person so receiving the manifest shall countersign the same and enter thereon such particulars as the Chief Customs-Authority from time to time directs in this behalf

66 No vessel arriving in any Customs-port from any Foreign Port, shall be allowed to break bulk until a manifest has been delivered as hereinbefore provided, nor until a copy of such manifest, together with an application for entry inwards, has been presented to the Customs-collector, and an order has been given thereon by such officer for the discharge of the cargo

The Customs-collector may refuse to give such order, until any port-clearance, cockett or other paper, which he knows or has reason to believe had been granted at the place from which the vessel is stated to have come, shall likewise have been delivered to him

Nothing in this section shall prevent a Customs-collector from granting, prior to receipt of the original manifest, and prior to the entry of the vessel at the Custom-house, a special pass, permitting bulk to be broken. The granting of such pass shall be subject to such rules as may from time to time be prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority

67 The Master of every vessel arriving from any Foreign Port shall, at the time of applying for entry inwards at any Customs-port, deliver to the Customs-collector, if required so to do, the bill of lading or a copy thereof for every part of the cargo laden on board, and shall answer all such questions relating to the vessel, cargo, crew, and voyage as are put to him by such officer.

68 No vessel, whether laden, partially laden or in ballast, shall depart from any Customs-port until a port-clearance has been granted by the Customs-collector or other officer duly authorized to grant the same.

Every application for port-clearance shall be made by the Master at least twenty-four hours before the intended departure of the vessel, and every Master of a vessel so applying for port-clearance shall answer to the proper officer of Customs such questions touching her departure and destination as are demanded of him.

70 The Master of every vessel intending to leave any Customs-port shall, at the time of applying for port-clearance, deliver to the Customs-collector a manifest in duplicate according to such form as may from time to time be prescribed by the Chief Customs-Authority, containing a true specification of all goods to be exported in the vessel and signed by the Master, and shall also so deliver such certificates as the Customs-collector acting under the general instructions of such Chief Customs-Authority, requires.

The Customs-collector when satisfied with the said certificates, and as to the correctness of the manifest, shall grant a port-clearance to the Master, and shall return at the same time to such Master one copy of the manifest duly countersigned by the proper officer of Customs.

Nothing in this section shall prevent the Customs-collector from granting (subject to such rules as the Chief Customs-Authority may from time to time prescribe) a port-clearance to the Master when the ship's agent furnishes sufficient security for duly delivering, within three days from the date of grant, the manifest and certificates aforesaid.

71 The Customs-collector may refuse port-clearance to any vessel until (a) the required manifest and certificates are produced,

(b) all Port-dues and other charges and penalties due by such vessel, or by the owner or Master thereof, have been duly paid, or their payment secured by such guarantee or by a deposit at such rate as such Customs-collector directs,

(c) a bond and security for the clearance of the import manifest within a reasonable period have been given by a duly appointed and accepted agent for the Master, the amount of such security and the length of such period being fixed in each case by such Customs-collector.

In calculating any period allowed, or any charge made, under this section, due deduction shall be made for any period during which a vessel after the completion of the discharge of import-cargo, and before commencing the shipment of export-cargo, is laid up by the withdrawal of the officer of Customs upon application from the Master

92 Any portion of an import-cargo intended for another Port, or any ship's stores intended for consumption in Port or on the home-wind voyage, may be declared by the Master of any vessel as not to be landed, and may thereupon, with the special sanction of the Customs-collector, be retained on board, and such cargo or ship's stores so retained shall not be subject to the payment of duty

Provided that all such cargo and ship's stores, excepting any ship's stores which may be duly transferred to another ship under section 31, 54 or 55, shall be entered in the export-manifest of the vessel as cargo or ship's stores not landed, and on which no duty has been paid thereof, does not land the same within such specified period, or if the cargo of any vessel, with the exception of only a small quantity of goods, has been discharged previously to the expiration of the period so appointed or specified, as the case may be,— the Master of such vessel, or a duly authorized officer of Customs, on his application, may then carry such goods to the Custom-house

The Customs-collector shall thereupon take charge of and grant receipts for such goods,

95 At any time after the arrival of any vessel, the Customs-collector may, with the consent of the Master of such vessel, cause any small package or parcel of goods to be carried to the Custom-house, there to remain for entry, in charge of the officers of Customs, during the remainder of the working days allowed under this Act for the landing of such package or parcel

96 If any package or parcel carried to the Custom-house under section 95 remains unclaimed on the expiration of the number of working days so allowed for its landing, or at the time of the clearance outwards of the vessel from which it was landed, the Master may give such notice as is provided in section 94, and the officer in charge of the Custom-house shall thereupon hold such package or parcel as provided in the said section

97 If the duties chargeable upon any goods carried to the Custom-house under section 91 or 95, together with the freight, primage, charges of landing and removal, rent and other charges to which such goods are liable, are not paid within four months from the date of entry of the vessel, or if such goods are not duly warehoused within such period, such goods may, after due notice in the official Gazette, be sold by public auction, and the proceeds thereof shall then be applied—first, to the payment of freight, primage and general average, next, to the payment of duties, and then, to the payment of other charges

The overplus, if any, shall be paid to the owner of the goods, on his application for the same, provided that such application be made within one year from the sale of the goods, or that good reason be shown why such application was not so made

ment, by notification in the official Gazette, declares this section to be applicable, from permitting the Master of any vessel immediately on receipt, under section 66, of an order or special pass, to discharge the cargo of such vessel or any portion thereof—

(b) at any landing-place or wharf belonging to any Port Commissioners, Port Trust or other duly constituted and responsible public body or company,

Any such ship's agent so receiving any goods or cargo shall be responsible to pay all claims for damage or short delivery which may be established by the owner thereof, and shall be entitled to recover from such owner his charges for service rendered, but not for commission or the like claimed by any agent or consignee previously constituted by the owner

99 If any goods be not cleared for home-consumption or for ware-house within two months from the date of landing to be sold thereof, or within such further period as the Customs-collector directs, such goods may, after due notice in the official Gazette, be sold by public auction, and the proceeds thereof shall be applied to the payment of duties and other charges to which the same were liable

Provided also that, where such goods are arms, ammunition or military stores, they may be sold or otherwise disposed of at such place (whether within or without British India), and in such manner, as the Local Government may from time to time direct

100 The owner of any dutiable goods intended to be delivered for home-consumption on the landing thereof from the importing ship, shall make entry of such goods by delivering to the Customs collector a bill of entry thereof in such form and containing such particulars as may from time to time be directed by the Chief Customs-Authority

The particulars of such entry shall correspond with the particulars given of the same goods and packages in the manifest of the ship

The delivery of such bill shall be deemed to have taken place on the date of the first presentation of such bill to an officer of customs duly authorized to receive the same

PROCEDURE RELATING TO OFFENCES, APPEALS, &c

166 Any officer of Customs duly employed in the prevention of smuggling may search any person on board of any vessel or boat in any Port in British India, or any person who has landed from any vessel or boat

Provided that such officer has reasonable ground to suppose that such person has dutiable or prohibited goods secreted about his person

167 When any officer of Customs is about to search any person under the provisions of section 166, such person may require the said officer to take him, previous to search, before the nearest Magistrate or Customs-collector

If such requisition be made, the officer of Customs may detain the person making it until he can bring him before the nearest Magistrate or Customs-collector

The Magistrate or Customs-collector before whom any person is so brought shall, if he see no reasonable ground for search, forthwith discharge such person, but if otherwise, shall direct that the search be made

A female shall not be searched by any but a female

168 Any duly empowered officer of Customs or other person duly employed for the prevention of smuggling, may stop and search any vessel, cart or other means of conveyance, for smuggled goods, provided that he has reasonable ground to suppose that smuggled goods are contained therein

169 Any Magistrate may, on application by a Customs-collector, stating his belief that dutiable or prohibited goods are secreted in any place in such district or division, issue a warrant to search for such goods

Such warrant shall be executed in the same way, and shall have the same effect, as a search-warrant issued under the Code of Criminal Procedure.

170 Any person against whom a reasonable suspicion exists that he has been guilty of an offence under this Act, may be detained in any place, either upon land or water, by any officer of Customs or other person duly employed for the prevention of smuggling

171 Every person detained on the ground that he has been guilty of an offence under this Act, shall forthwith be taken before a Magistrate or Customs-collector

172 When any person detained on the ground that he has been guilty of an offence under this Act, is taken before a Magistrate, such Magistrate may, if he see reasonable cause, order him to be detained in gaol or in the custody of the Police for such time as is necessary to enable such Magistrate to communicate with the officers of Customs

Provided that any person so detained shall be liberated on giving recognizance or security to the satisfaction of the Magistrate to appear at such time and place as such Magistrate appoints for his appearance

173 If any person liable to be detained under this Act, is not detained at the time of committing the offence for which he is so liable, or after detention, makes his escape, he shall at any time afterwards be liable to be detained and taken before a Magistrate, to be dealt with as if he had been detained at the time of committing such offence

174 When any person employed on the crew of any of Her Majesty's ships is detained under this Act, the detaining officer shall forthwith give notice thereof to the commanding officer of the ship, who shall thereupon place such person in security on board of such ship, until the detaining officer has obtained a warrant from a Magistrate for bringing up such person to be dealt with according to law

The Magistrate shall duly grant a warrant upon complaint made to him by the detaining officer, stating the offence for which the person is detained

175 Any vessel or goods liable to confiscation may be seized in any place, either upon land or water, by any officer of Customs or other person duly employed for the prevention of smuggling

In every such case the Police-officer seizing the goods shall send written notice of their seizure and detention to the nearest Custom-house, and immediately after the dismissal of the complaint or information, or the conclusion of the enquiry or trial, the said Police-officer shall cause such goods to be conveyed to, and deposited at, the nearest Custom-house, to be there proceeded against according to law

178 When any vessel or goods is or are seized, or any person is detained, under this Act, the officer or other person making such seizure or detention shall, on demand of the person in charge of the vessel or goods so seized, or of the person so detained, give to such person a statement in writing of the reason for such seizure or detention

The officer adjudging confiscation shall take and hold possession of the same, and every officer of Police, on the requisition of such officer, shall assist him in taking and holding such possession.

183 If any vessel actually departs without a port-clearance, or after failing to bring to when required under section 16 at any station appointed under section 16, the penalty to which the Master of such vessel is liable may be adjudged by the Chief Officer of Customs of any Customs-port in British India to which such vessel proceeds, or in which she is, or in the case of Aden by such officer as the Governor of Bombay in Council appoints in this behalf

A certificate of such departure or failure to bring to when required, purporting to be signed by the Chief Officer of Customs of the Port from which the vessel is stated to have so departed, shall be sufficient prima facie proof of the fact so certified

184 The award of any confiscation, penalty or increased rates of duty under this Act by an officer of Customs shall not prevent the infliction of any punishment to which the person affected thereby is liable under any other law

186 In any case adjudicated by an officer of Customs, any party aggrieved by the award may, within three months from the date of the award, appeal to the Chief Customs-Authority, or, in such cases as the Local Government directs, to any other superior officer of Customs empowered in that behalf by the Local Government

Such authority or superior officer may thereupon make such further enquiry and pass such order as he thinks fit, confirming, altering or annulling the original award

Provided that no such order in appeal shall have the effect of subjecting any person to any greater confiscation, penalty or rates of duty than has or have been adjudged against him in the original award

The Chief Justice shall declare who shall be Taxing-officer within the meaning of this section.

52 Nothing in this chapter applies to the commission payable to the Accountant General of the High Court at Fort William, or to the fees which any officer of a High Court is allowed to receive in addition to a fixed salary.

FEES IN OTHER COURTS AND IN PUBLIC OFFICES

53 Except in the Courts mentioned in Chapter VII, and subject to the exemptions contained in schedule six, no document of any of the kinds specified as chargeable in the said fourth or fifth schedule shall be filed, exhibited or recorded in any Court of justice, or shall be received by any public officer, or granted under his seal or signature, unless in respect of such document there be paid a fee of an amount not less than that indicated by either of such schedules as the proper fee for such document.

Fees on documents filed, &c., in Mufassal Courts or in public offices

54 If any such document is through mistake or inadvertence received, filed or used in any Court or office without being properly stamped, the presiding Judge or the head of the office, as the case may be, or, in the case of a High Court, any Judge of such Court, may, if he thinks fit, order that such document be stamped as he may direct, and on such document being stamped accordingly, the same and every proceeding relative thereto shall be as valid as if it had been properly stamped in the first instance.

Power to stamp document inadvertently received

55. Where any such document is amended in order merely to correct a mistake and to make it conform to the original intention of the parties, and the duty with which it is chargeable is not thereby increased, it shall not be necessary to impose a fresh stamp.

(d) where the land forms part of an estate paying revenue to Government, but is not a definite

share of such estate and is not separately assessed as abovementioned—the market-value of the land

Provided that, in the territories subject to the Governor of Bombay in Council, the value of the land shall be deemed to be—

57 Notwithstanding anything herein contained, throughout the territories subject to the Governor of Port St George in Council, the fees payable in suits by Government ryots for the recovery of land sold for arrears of revenue shall not exceed the amount which would be payable if the value of the subject-matter were only the rent of the land payable for the year next before the date of presenting the plaint

58 The amount of fee payable under this Act on a memorandum of appeal against an order relating to compensation under any Act for the time being in force for the acquisition of land for public purposes shall be computed according to the difference between the amount awarded and the amount claimed by the appellant

59. If the Court sees reason to think that the annual nett profits or the market-value of any such land, house or garden as is mentioned in section 56, clauses v and vi, have or has been wrongly estimated, the Court may, for the purpose of computing the fee payable in any suit therein mentioned, issue a commission to any proper person directing him to make such local or other investigation as may be necessary, and to report thereon to the Court

may in its discretion refund the excess paid as such fee but if the estimation has been insufficient, the Court shall require the plaintiff to pay so much additional fee as would have been payable had the said market-value or nett profits been rightly estimated

61 In suits for mesne profits or for immoveable property and mesne profits, or for an account, if the profits or amount decreed are or is in excess of the profits claimed or the amount at which the plaintiff valued the relief sought, the decree shall not be executed until the difference between the fee actually paid and the fee which would have been payable had the suit comprised the whole of the profits or amount so decreed shall have been paid to the proper officer

When the amount of mesne profits is left to be ascertained in the course of the execution of the decree, if the profits so ascertained exceed the profits claimed, the further execution of the decree shall be stayed until the difference between the fee actually paid and the fee which would have been payable had the suit comprised the whole of the profits so ascertained is paid. If the additional fee is not paid within such time as the Court shall fix, the suit shall be dismissed

Where any suit or appeal in which any such question has arisen comes before a Court of appeal, reference or revision, and such Court considers that the said question has been wrongly decided, to the detriment of the revenue, it shall require the party by whom such fee has been paid to pay so much additional fee as would have been payable had the question been rightly decided, and the provisions of the second paragraph of section 60 shall apply

63. When any appeal is presented to a civil Court, not against the whole of a decision, but only against so much thereof as relates to a portion of the subject-matter of the suit, the memorandum of appeal shall be chargeable with the fee which would have been payable if the subject-matter had been such portion only, and, if on the hearing of such appeal, the respondent takes, under section 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure, an objection to any part of the said decision other than the part appealed against, the Court shall not hear such objection until the respondent shall have paid the additional fee which would have been payable had the appeal comprised the part of the decision so objected to

suits embracing separately each of such subjects would be liable under this Act.

Nothing in the former part of this section shall be deemed to affect the power conferred by the Code of Civil Procedure, section 45

65 No document mentioned in Schedule IV or Schedule V and requiring an adhesive stamp under the rules for the time being in force under this Act shall be filed or acted upon in any proceeding in any Court or office until the stamp has been cancelled in manner prescribed by such rules

66. When the first or only examination of a person who complains of the offence of wrongful confinement, or of wrongful restraint, or of any offence other than an offence for which police-officers may arrest without a warrant, and who has not already presented a petition on which a fee has been levied under this Act, is reduced to writing under the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the complainant shall pay a fee of eight annas, unless the Court thinks fit to remit such payment

67 Whenever an application or petition containing a complaint or charge of an offence, other than an offence for which police-officers may arrest without warrant, is presented to a criminal Court, the Court, if it convict the accused person, shall, in addition to the penalty imposed upon him, order him to repay to the complainant the fee paid on such application or petition

In the case mentioned in section 66, the Court, if it convict the accused person, shall, in addition to the penalty imposed upon him, order him to repay to the complainant the fee, if any, paid by the latter for the examination

When the complainant has paid fees for serving processes in either of the cases mentioned in the first and second paragraphs of this section, the Court, if it convict the accused person, shall, in addition to the penalty imposed upon him, order him to repay such fees to the complainant

All fees ordered to be repaid under this section may be recovered as if they were fines imposed by the Court

PROBATES, LETTERS OF ADMINISTRATION AND CERTIFICATES OF ADMINISTRATION

68. Where any person on applying for the probate of a will or letters of administration has estimated the property of the deceased to be of greater value than the same has afterwards proved to be, and has consequently paid too high a court-fee thereon, if within six months after the true value of the property has been ascertained, such person produces the probate or letters to the Court by which the probate or letters has or have been granted, and delivers to such Court a particular inventory and valuation of the property of the deceased, verified by affidavit or affirmation,

and if such Court is satisfied that a greater fee was paid on the probate or letters than the law required,

the said Court may at its discretion—

(a) cancel the stamp on the probate or letters, if such stamp has not been already cancelled,

(b) order that another stamp be substituted for denoting the court-fee which should have been paid thereon, and

69. Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of

Relief where debts due from a deceased person have been paid out of his estate

such Court that an executor or administrator has paid debts due from the deceased to such an amount as, being deducted out of the amount or value of the estate, reduces the same to a sum which, if it had been the whole gross amount or value of the estate, would have occasioned a less court-fee to be paid on the probate or letters of administration granted in respect of such estate than has been actually paid thereon under this Act,

the Court may order the amount of the difference to be refunded, provided the same be claimed within three years after the date of such probate or letters

But when, by reason of any legal proceeding, the debts due from the deceased have not been ascertained and paid, or his effects have not been recovered and made available, and in consequence thereof the executor or administrator is prevented from claiming the return of such difference within the said term of three years, the Court may allow such further time for making the claim as may appear to be reasonable under the circumstances.

70 Whenever a grant of probate or letters of administration has been or is made in respect of the whole of the property belonging to an estate, and the full fee chargeable under this Act has been or is paid thereon, no fee shall be chargeable under the same Act when a like grant is made in respect of the whole or any part of the same property belonging to the same estate.

Relief in case of several grants

Whenever such a grant has been or is made in respect of any property forming part of an estate, the amount of fees then actually paid under this Act shall be deducted when a like grant is made in respect of property belonging to the same estate, identical with or including the property to which the former grant relates

71 The probate of the will, or the letters of

administration of the effects, of any person deceased, heretofore or hereafter granted, shall be deemed valid and available by his executors or administrators for recovering, transferring or assigning any moveable or immoveable property whereof or whereto the deceased was possessed or entitled, either wholly or partially as a trustee, notwithstanding the amount or value of such property is not included in the amount or value of the estate in respect of which a court-fee was paid on such probate or letters of administration

72. When any person on applying for probate or letters of administration

has estimated the estate of the deceased to be of less value than the same has afterwards proved to be, and has

in consequence paid too low a court-fee thereon, the Court by which the probate or letters has or have been granted, may, on the value of the estate of the deceased being verified by affidavit or affirmation, cause the probate or letters of administration to be duly stamped on payment of the full court-fee which ought to have been originally paid thereon in respect of such value, and of the further penalty, if the probate or letters is or are produced within one year from the date of the grant, of five times, or if it or they is or are produced after one year from such date, of twenty times, such proper court-fee, without any deduction of the court-fee originally paid on such probate or letters

Provided that, if the application be made within six months after the ascertainment of the true value of the estate and the discovery that too low a court-fee was at first paid on the probate or letters, and if the Court is satisfied that such fee was paid in consequence of a mistake or of its not being known at the time that some particular part of the estate belonged to the deceased, and without any intention of fraud or to delay the payment of the proper court-fee, the Court may remit the said penalty, and cause the probate or letters to be duly stamped on payment only of the sum wanting to make up the fee which should have been at first paid thereon.

too low a court-fee has been paid at first, the said authority shall not cause the same to be duly stamped in manner aforesaid until the administrator has given such security to the Court by which the letters of administration have been granted as ought by law to have been given on the granting thereof in case the full value of the estate of the deceased had then been ascertained.

74. Where too low a court-fee has been paid

on any probate or letters of administration in consequence of any mistake, or of its not being known at the time that some particular part of the estate belonged to the deceased, if any executor or administrator acting under such probate or letters does not, within six months after the discovery of the mistake or of any effects not known at the time to have belonged to the deceased, apply to the said authority and pay what is wanting to make up the court-fee which ought to have been paid at first on such probate or letters, he shall forfeit the sum of one thousand rupees and also a further sum at the rate of ten rupees per cent on the amount of the sum wanting to make up the proper court-fee.

75 When any Court orders under this

Collector to deliver or pay stamp or amount directed by Court.

chapter any stamp to be substituted or amount to be refunded, such stamp or amount shall be delivered or paid by any Collector to the person producing the Court's order or certificate authorizing such delivery or payment

76. The provisions of this chapter shall, mutatis

mutandis, apply to certificates granted under Act No XL of 1858 (for making better provision for the care of the persons and property of Minors in the Pre-agency of Fort William in Bengal), or Act No. XXVII of 1860 (for facilitating the collection of debts on successions, and for the security of parties paying debts to the representatives of deceased persons), or Act No. XX of 1864 (for making better provision for the care of the persons and property of Minors in the Presidency of Bombay), or Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827 (to provide for the formal recognition of Heirs, Executors and Administrators, and for the appointment of Administrators and Managers of property by the Courts), and to the holders of such certificates.

CHAPTER X.

REFUNDS

77. Subject to such rules as may from time to time be made by the Governor General in Council as to the evidence, by affidavit or otherwise, which the Collector may require, allowance shall be made by the Collector for stamps spoiled in the cases hereinafter mentioned (that is to say) —

(1.) The stamp on any paper inadvertently and undesignedly spoiled, obliterated, or by any means rendered unfit for the purpose intended, before any instrument written thereon is executed by any party, and for which stamp no money or other consideration has been paid or given to the attorney, pleader, or other person employed to transact the business intended to have been carried into execution thereby, or to the person by whom the same was written

(2.) Any adhesive stamp which has never been used or affixed to any paper, but which has been inadvertently and undesignedly spoiled or rendered unfit for use

(3.) The stamp used or intended to be used for any bill of exchange or promissory note, signed by or on behalf of the drawer or intended drawer, but not delivered out of the hands to the payee or intended payee, or any person on his behalf, or deposited with any person as a security for the payment of money, or in any way negotiated, issued, or put in circulation, or made use of in any other manner whatever, and which being a bill of exchange has not been accepted by the drawee, and provided that the paper on which any such stamp is impressed does not bear any signature intended as or for the acceptance of any bill of exchange to be afterwards written thereon

(4.) The stamp used or intended to be used for any bill of exchange or promissory note signed by or on behalf of the drawer thereof, but which from any omission or error has been spoiled or rendered useless, although the same, being a bill of exchange, may have been presented for acceptance or accepted or endorsed, or being a promissory note, may have been delivered to the payee, provided that another completed and duly stamped bill of exchange or promissory note is produced identical in every particular, except in the correction of such error or omission as aforesaid, with the spoiled bill or note

(5.) The stamp used for any of the following instruments, that is to say —

(a) an instrument executed by any party thereto, but afterwards found to be absolutely void in law from the beginning

(b) an instrument executed by any party thereto, but afterwards found unfit by reason of any error or mistake therein for the purpose originally intended.

(c) an instrument executed by any party thereto, but which by reason of the death of any person by whom it is necessary that it should be executed, without having executed the same, or of the refusal of any such person to execute the same, or to advance any money intended to be thereby secured, cannot be completed so as to effect the intended transaction in the form proposed

(f) an instrument executed by any party thereto, which for want of registration within the time required by law becomes null and void

(1) that in the case of an executed instrument,

(a) that instrument is given up to be cancelled

(b) the application for relief is made within six months after the date of the instrument, or, if it is not dated, within six months after the execution thereof by the person by whom it was first of all executed, except where from unavoidable circumstances any instrument for which another instrument has been substituted cannot be given up to be cancelled within the aforesaid period, and in that case within six months after the date of execution of the substituted instrument, and except where the spoiled instrument has been sent abroad, and in that case within six months after it has been received back in any part of British India

(2) that in the case of stamped paper, not having any executed instrument written thereon, and of an adhesive stamp not affixed to any material, the application for relief is made within six months after the stamp has been spoiled as aforesaid

78. When any person has inadvertently used for an instrument liable to duty a stamp of greater value than was necessary, or has inadvertently used any stamp for an instrument not liable to any duty, the Collector may, on application made within six months after the date of the instrument, or, if it is not dated, within

six months after the execution thereof by the person by whom it was first or alone executed, and upon the instrument, if liable to any duty, being re-stamped with the proper duty, cancel and allow as spoiled the stamp so misused

79. In any case in which allowance is made for spoiled or misused stamps the Collector may give in lieu thereof other stamps of the same denomination and value, or, if required, and he thinks proper, stamps of any other denomination to the same amount in value, or, at his discretion, the same value in money, deducting the proper allowance on the purchase from Government of stamps of the like description

80 When any person is possessed of a stamp which has not been spoiled or rendered unfit for the purpose intended, but for which he has no immediate use, the Collector may, if he in his discretion think fit, repay to the applicant the amount or value of such stamp in money, deducting the proper discount, upon his delivering up the stamp to be cancelled, and proving to the Collector's satisfaction that it was purchased by the applicant with a bona fide intention to use it, and that he has paid the full value thereof without any deduction (except only the amount of such discount), and that the stamp was so purchased within the period of six months next preceding the application

81 If a plaint or appeal which has been rejected by the lower Court on any of the grounds mentioned in the Code of Civil Procedure is ordered to be received, or if a suit is remanded in appeal, on any of the grounds mentioned in section 562 of the same Code, for a second decision by the lower Court, the appellate Court may grant to the appellant a certificate, authorizing him to receive back from the Collector the full amount of fee paid on the memorandum of appeal

Provided that, if, in the case of a remand in appeal, the order of remand does not cover the whole of the subject-matter of the suit, the certificate so granted shall not authorize the appellant to receive back more than so much fee as would have been originally payable on the part or parts of such subject-matter in respect whereof the suit has been remanded

82 When an application for a review of judgment is presented on or after the nineteenth day from the date of the decree, the Court, unless the delay was caused by the applicant's laches, may, in its discretion, grant him a certificate authorizing him to receive back from the Collector so much of the fee paid on the application as exceeds the fee which would have been payable had it been presented before such day

83 When an application for a review of judgment is admitted, and on the re-hearing, the Court reverses or modifies its former decision on the ground of mistake in law or fact, the applicant shall be entitled to a certificate from the Court authorizing him to receive back from the Collector the fee paid on the application.

But nothing in the former part of this section shall entitle the applicant to such certificate where the reversal or modification is due, wholly or in part, to fresh evidence which might have been produced at the original hearing.

84. When a plaint disclosing a reasonable case on the merits is presented to any civil Court in such form that the Judge rejects it, not for any substantial defect, but on account of a purely technical error in form only, and so as to leave the plaintiff free to prosecute the same case in another form against the same defendant, the value of the stamp on the plaint shall be refunded to the plaintiff on his presenting an application to the Collector of the District in which the Court is situate, together with a certificate from the Judge who rejected the plaint, that it was rejected under the circumstances above described and that in his opinion the value of the stamp should be refunded.
